Strategic Report
for the Year Ended 31 October 2020

The trustees present their strategic report for the year ended 31 October 2020.

The principal activity of the charity in the year under review was that of creating a centre for cultural and environmental education and research that offers a holistic and dynamic approach to learning. All the new facilities are being created entirely through the work of trainees/apprentices and volunteers.

REVIEW OF BUSINESS

Now approaching year 18 of the initial business plan it is encouraging to note how closely the development of the project has followed the route map set out from the original vision of 2004

One of the main aims of the initiative from the outset was to enliven and broaden the cultural life of the area, creating a site that would enrich the local biodiversity and to raise awareness of the importance of conserving and enhancing our natural resources in order to sustain a healthy economic community life. Central to the long-term development plan was to ensure that this work was designed so as to maximise the opportunities for engaging volunteers, trainees and both from the local and wider global community. The ambitious building and landscaping programme that was awarded planning permission back in 2006 has transformed the formerly neglected farm into a thriving community resource and a hub for cultural and educational events, skills training activities, volunteering and work experience opportunities. Though not exclusively aimed at young people - by and large the majority of the many hundreds of participants engaged through the project are younger people between the ages of 16 and 26, through to regular local volunteers are in their late 70s. Led by the dedicated group of older volunteers from the local community - the organic gardening work and habitat conservation compliments the heavy construction work underway on the new workshops and visitor facilities and succeeds in attracting a broader spectrum of volunteers. Whereas the traditional and eco-building work engages those eager to gain specific skills and experience in a particular field of interest such as carpentry or masonry.

A clear template has been established for both engaging new participants and supporting them through each stage of our range of practical training programmes. Each of the main building development programmes has been successful in attracting funding through emphasising the skills training and volunteering opportunities that have been built into them. It comes as a surprise and wonder to many of the visitors to the centre to hear that all our buildings and landscaping - which demonstrate a high level of craftsmanship, has been carried out entirely by trainees and volunteers, most of whom were quite unfamiliar with this kind of work beforehand. The fruits of their commitment and generosity will stand as an enduring testimony to inspire and encourage a can do attitude for people who come here in the future. Seeing is believing - one has to actually experience the fine workmanship on the massive oak framing of the boatbuilding workshop and the stunning roof carpentry of the new visitor centre, CAMAS and Observatory building to believe that such an achievement was possible through volunteer work alone. As such it has become one of the most photographed and widely publicised grass roots community initiatives anywhere in the UK. During its development the project has been widely featured through S4C & Welsh radio programmes, national magazines such as Border Life and Coastal Life and National Trust magazine articles, photographs of our volunteer projects, included by several of our partners in their annual reports, promotional videos and marketing publicity. Documentaries of our skills training produced by both the Welsh Assembly Government and the Scottish Government are regularly featured at national volunteering conferences as an exemplar of how small rural communities can stimulate regeneration through their own initiative and resourcefulness. There is now a playlist of short video's documenting the progress made by trainees and volunteers in building each of the eco-facilities at the centre:

Building CAMAS : <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=GPGzJI2Wmws&t=1s>

Our bunkhouses have enabled year-round residential volunteer with as many as 6 volunteers resident at the farmhouse and Celtic thatched roundhouses. Visiting volunteers together with the team of regular local volunteers have moved tonnes of earth, stone and timber during the various construction projects, the cost of having to have had contractors to carry out this work would have made some of these projects prohibitively expensive. In this way Felin Uchaf offers funders the best possible value for money, by planning in volunteer work for every building project means that we are creating both important physical Community Asset and, more importantly: a valuable skills asset within the local community. Over the past 4 years alone 78 volunteers have gifted over 40,000 hours toward the project, learning new skills, gaining their confidence and team building capacity - this is an outstanding achievement. Many volunteers write glowing testimonials describing the positive life changing experiences that they have had at the centre and most weeks we are being asked by prospective employers or places of further training and education - to provide references for our former volunteers and trainees. Felin Uchaf is making a real difference to the lives and work prospects of the young people that participate in the centre's life and activities. Please see the website for testimonials www.felinwales.org. We have also rented out some of the accommodation on site through Airbnb in order to generate a sustainable unrestricted income to meet running costs. This has proved even more popular now in its third year, generating an income that enables us to meet the monthly loan repayments well beyond the close of the tourism season in September. We aim to expand this side of the enterprise significantly over the coming years and have applied for full planning permission to create an Eco-glamping facility on site with new eco-cabins, camping field and shower/washrooms facilities. The current pandemic situation, coupled with the withdrawal of many of our regular streams of funding following Brexit, has severely curtailed our residential volunteer work and temporarily halted our programme of public cultural courses and events in the roundhouse but as we emerge out of this, we aim to re-establish our commitment to the original vision of providing training and learning opportunities to a wide spectrum of people.

The expanded community garden and herb garden and improved volunteer facilities significantly increased our capacity to provide more practical activities and enabled 25 volunteers and attracted many visitors to learn more about sustainable land use and organic methods of food production. The project helps meet a growing need for information, training and support for many younger people from across the UK and abroad who want to explore more responsible land management practices and to source wholesome, locally grown organic produce.

- Despite the lower numbers of residential volunteers and trainees due in part to the current pandemic restrictive measures and in part to the negative fallout from Brexit for international young people with EU supported training - this year the volunteers helped to build our latest facility dedicated to promoting the richness of local heritage: the CAMAS building - or The Centre for Archaeology, Mythology and Storytelling (Canolfan Archaeoleg, Mythoeg a Storiâu). The funding for the project ended last year but we have managed to accrue a large amount of natural building materials such as locally sourced oak for the interior carpentry. The facility will provide visitors with a year round programme of events, activities and courses that maximise the economic potential of local historic and archaeological sites and local Welsh mythology-folklore associations and significantly enhance the Peninsula's appeal as a prime heritage visitor destination. The initial development phase will include: developing new heritage exhibition and interpretation material highlighting the history of the peninsula from ancient times & heritage events programmes & creating an effective UK & Europe wide marketing plan. Constructing the new centre has provided apprenticeship training in niche heritage skills and the facility will provide studio -workspaces to enable local artists and craftspeople to interpret and share the Llyn Peninsula's rich cultural & folklore heritage and archaeological significance. The centre will create a vital hub for the development of the area as an internationally recognised Eco-Museum that will both raise the profile of the entire centre's other eco-visitor facilities, increase visits to local historic sites and partner visitor facilities & promote the development of diverse new employment opportunities in heritage & cultural tourism.

Looking to the future we are aiming to generate a sustainable income from several new funding streams:

- through hosting fee-paying courses, workshops and seminars on natural and built heritage themes from eco-building to archaeology in the new Visitor Centre
- through developing the centre's Green & Cultural Tourism potential. The building of the new Eco-Visitor Centre & will include a shop, canteen-café & seminar room and significantly increase our capacity to host larger groups and all-weather events & providing a resource for organisations and business to run residential cooperative-team building and sustainability sessions.
- through further developing the biodynamic farm, gardens and café-canteen as both a training & volunteering resource and as a viable Community Supported Agriculture CSA initiative, including establishing a Paysanne style bakery within the kitchens, baking our own organic, site-grown and site-milled old -variety grain flours using the woodfired cob oven.

- through providing accommodation and eco-activity holidays for visitors in the new Celtic Roundhouses We are also exploring the potential of building and then renting out timber glamping pods in one of the fields to visitors and to short courses participants. We are currently renting three of the new roundhouse & pod accommodation facilities to visitors through Airbnb this will rise to 4 next year plus a further 4 new eco-pods to be erected on site by summer 2022.

- developing the site as a specialist heritage carpentry workshop providing commissioned design and build services for eco-building projects, specialist carpentry and design consultancy work. Our resident boatbuilder and carpenters at the boatbuilding workshop - Cwt Cychod - have been entrusted by the National Trust to restore some of their locally built historic wooden boats and by the Glaslyn Wildlife Project to further develop their oak framed outside classroom as partnership projects that benefit both sites through increased publicity and awareness. In time the workshop will be rented out to a carpentry business on the proviso that there will always be a training placement available for a young person.

- through generating our own electricity from a new wind turbine and photovoltaic installation (planning granted)

The centre's staff are regularly being invited to give talks and presentations about the charity's pioneering work - albeit through zoom at present - to a wide range of community groups and rural regeneration initiatives throughout the UK, Ireland and mainland Europe. This is a clear affirmation of support for the charitable community work that is done at Felin Uchaf and helps draw other support and investment from other forward thinking individuals and organisations.

THE YEAR IN DETAIL

Skills training

Each year we welcome students from the French ENSTIB Wood Engineering college at Epinal, on international internships. Due to the current situation - this year only one woodworking student managed to obtain the necessary permissions and support. Students stay with us for around 3 months and gain a range of valuable skills in traditional carpentry. Close relations with the college over the past 5 years have led to Felin Uchaf being established by our French partners as a renowned centre for excellence in teaching heritage carpentry skills. Whatever the fallout or opportunities posed by Brexit, the centre will continue to work to strengthen partnership opportunities with our European neighbours. From the start- the model we aim to develop for the centre here at Felin Uchaf is similar to that of the Scandinavian Folk Schools, such as those offering the International Youth Initiative Programmes for holistic education at Jarna, Sweden <http://yip.se/about/>. The newly built facilities will form part of the campus resources for enabling young people to experience on-site work experience and training with independent craftspeople, makers, gardeners, cooks and caterers based on-site as practical apprentices.

Key to Felin Uchaf's success is that as a grassroots initiative it has grown out of a real local need and is therefore embedded in the community so that ideas, skills and practices that arise through the project find immediate practical application within that community. The ethos of sustainable development is carried through all aspects of the initiative and can be translated into sound practice and principles with which young people particularly, can use as a tool kit to build more sustainable lifestyles from sourcing and producing local organic food through to sustainable and affordable local housing projects. The information and skills learned through participating at the Centre help empower young people to take positive actions to revive and revitalise their communities. In this remote rural economically deprived area the promoting an engaged, motivated, can-do attitude is making a real difference to young people's outlook and prospects.

Volunteering projects

The volunteer input again this year has been significantly lower than previous years due to the pandemic restrictions. With only 8 volunteers resident at the centre for at least a month and aged between 16-28 years - some have been resident at the centre for up to 12 months having gifted an astounding 8,000 hours towards the project. Volunteer time sheets go toward evidencing a substantial amount of in-kind match funding that in turn attracts grant funding towards the various capital and revenue project costs. The lack of funding streams being made available through public funds at present for the volunteer training we have traditionally offered is certainly cause for concern and we are therefore looking to other means of generating sustainable funding such as through private sponsorship and crowdfunding, to sustain the volunteering and training programmes. The regular volunteers have achieved a huge amount of work on every aspect of the project but especially the gardening. Volunteer staff coordinated the regular work days and helped manage the overall project as part of the steering group. The local team were joined by a small number of visiting UK based volunteers and 3 international student volunteers.

Adequately coordinated and suitably motivated: volunteer teams can effectively carry out even the more complex and advanced construction work as demonstrated this year by the carving of the traditional green oak framing and lime fine plasterwork on the new heritage visitor centre: CAMAS - the Centre for Archaeology, Mythology and Storytelling and adjacent Observatory room that has involved the accurate marking & cutting of hundreds of complex woodworking joints, some of the most complex and ambitious wood carving projects anywhere in the UK - and their final assembly by hand with block and tackle. The finished structure is a stunning testimony to the dedication and high level of craftsmanship of all the trainees and volunteers involved - that to date have come from 36 different countries! The comments entered into the visitors book clearly demonstrate how satisfying and rewarding the visiting volunteers have found their time at the Centre. There is a unique and friendly atmosphere here that makes people feel welcomed and enriches the varied and interesting work they undertake.

Our volunteers produced two excellent videos of their volunteering experiences. These are available for viewing YouTube through the following links:

Progress with Buildings

The main project this year has been the building of the CAMAS building- the Centre for Archaeology, Mythology and Storytelling. The foundations and groundwork for the building were laid as early as 2009 and the current funding by the Coastal Communities Fund enables us to complete the massive carved oak roof to support a turf covering, lime-plastering, the laying of insulated limecrete floors and the electrical work. When completed the building will include a state of the art exhibition space/ auditorium, two craft studios and kitchen 2 bathrooms, outside garden with seating as well as an adjacent observatory - a 12 sided intricately carved oak frame meeting and interpretation space.

Eco-Visitor Centre -CLAS. The main focus of volunteering and trainee work has been directed towards fitting-out and finishing this substantial earth & straw baled walled and oak timber framed building project - forging ironwork for the doors and making coloured fused-glass windows inspired by plant designs. When fully operational, these spectacular oak framed cafe and spacious seminar room facilities will enable the Centre to host a wide range of artistic, cultural and practical craft courses and workshops, conferences and community events all of which will contribute towards enabling the centre to earn a sustainable income.

The Biodynamic Community Garden

The garden has been developed as a teaching aid and a point of research into the growing and use of herbs and has increased awareness about the importance of local traditions associated with the growing of indigenous herbs. Some of the most celebrated of Welsh herbalists lived and practiced within a mile of the Centre and the Llyn Peninsula has a rich folk herb lore tradition going back to mediaeval times.

Over the past five years the garden project has provided a focal point for local volunteers of all ages, probation service users, women's support groups, local school pupils and college students to come together and, with sweat and toil - and plenty of fun - to create a wild pharmacy which provides a superb teaching resource for the area's primary and secondary schools so that a more holistic approach to learning about the organic growing and harvesting of herbs can be encouraged. Local people and businesses such as Cafe Plas Carmel, Anelog and Blades Cafe, Abersoch have expressed interest in purchasing the garden's produce on a regular basis.

The extensive vegetable gardens and polytunnels are an exemplar of sustainable land management and provide a valuable focal point for local volunteers, especially older people, as well as wholesome organic-biodynamic produce for all the daily volunteer meals.

Cultural Events

This year our entire programme of public events was put on hold due to the pandemic restrictions. In the previous two years we piloted an international Storytelling Festival, run over the months of July and August - welcoming artists from Italy, Sweden, Belgium and Germany as well as many UK based performers. A full programme of bilingual storytelling and music concerts ran through the summer months and attracted good numbers of local people and visitors. Fireside evening events in the big roundhouse frequently attracted a capacity audience of over 120 people. We organised performances at local partner venues such as St Hywyn's Church Aberdaron and Plas Glyn Y Weddw, Llanbedrog. As well as contributing toward enriching the cultural life of the local area these events served as a valuable first introduction to the Centre and many people returned to lend a helping hand and to volunteer afterwards. It is our aim to recommence the cultural events programme once restrictions have been lifted and support becomes available once more for hosting such a programme.

LOOKING AHEAD

As with every centre open to the public and hosting public events and training/volunteering programmes - the challenges facing us as we move forward into a post-pandemic-restrictions world are considerable. We have had to delay or put on hold many of our short term aspirations but the challenge from here on is to continue to develop the centre as a social enterprise whilst exploring new avenues of funding and generating income from commercial activities. We are currently planning a Crowdfunding initiative to raise funds to complete the cafe. To this affect we are focusing our fundraising resources on obtaining strategic funding for income generating projects such as the current CAMAS construction project of the New Centre for Archaeology, Mythology and Storytelling and towards building work to the old farmhouse which is in urgent need of a new roof and complete interior refurbishment.

The completion of the CLAS and CAMAS visitor facilities, adjacent farm shop with produce from the organic gardens and orchards, the hosting of a year round programme of skills workshops and residential cultural courses and the renting out of roundhouses and glamping pods on site as business enterprise resources will start to generate a regular income toward the centre and in this way we aim to sustainably meet both our Commercial Mortgage Loan repayments and provide towards the core funding costs salary costs of a full time project manager for the centre.
