Annual Report and Financial Statements

2024-2025

Annual Report from the Trustees

The Board of With Love All Things Are Possible [WLATAP] has continued in the year under review to respond to the humanitarian emergency in Myanmar, much of which is a consequence of the attempted military coup that has done such harm to the people of Burma (Myanmar).

The Board has been guided in this regard by the expanded purposes of the charity that were approved by the Commission in March 2021.

These purposes have remained valuable to guide our work.

WLATAP's charitable goals for the year under review have remained:

1. The relief of poor children living in developing countries with a special emphasis on children with a physical or mental disability by the provision of grants to schools, in particular, but not exclusively, so as to improve their education and their lives
2. The relief of adults and children in developing countries through supporting healthcare and healthcare institutions so as to improve their health and lives
3. The relief of refugees in developing countries to improve their health and lives.

WLATAP has delivered on these purposes through the activities described below. In all of this work, the Board has always been guided by advice and input from Myanmar partners.

1. Federal Healthcare project: creating spaces for dialogue

WLATAP has continued in this year to deliver upon the inclusive healthcare project that it has undertaken since the coup.

As reported in 2022, 2023 and 2024, Burma's early experience of the COVID-19 pandemic, while serious, was mitigated by actions undertaken by the democratic government of the time. These mitigations collapsed with the military coup, and we were asked to develop a practical and action-oriented COVID-19 Action Plan that was delivered to partners during 2023.

In the first four months of the year under review, we continued to work closely alongside a broad range of ethnic healthcare organisations (EHOs) from across Myanmar. Some of these are established pre-coup entities with structures to deliver health needs across their areas. Others are newer, younger, post-coup entities that have come into being to respond to people's needs.

Supported by our Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office [FCDO] donor, WLATAP has enabled wider Federal Health planning. The FCDO grant to WLATAP concluded on 31 July 2024, and it has not been possible for the work to continue.

These funds were used to retain and expand a team of experienced international and local consultants. Our Project Leader was well versed in the healthcare realities of Burma, and he led the recruitment process, as well as the delivery of this complex piece of work.

The vision for this programme was strong – to use healthcare as the vehicle for promoting dialogue across communities. Ours was a participatory process that grew connections and ideas between multiple groups who see a shared future in a federal Myanmar. We worked only at the request of our Myanmar partners, and WLATAP remained a discreet enabler of developments that are building a new devolved health system for the country.

Workshops and activities around federal health planning bring together groups into a dialogue, but those same workshops also lead to practical benefits which are catalysed by this programme. This enables the number of communities engaged in the process to grow, so that new voices are heard and participation is not restricted. The team is especially keen to bring in the voices of women and of younger people who have taken on leadership roles in new organisations.

We enabled groups to come together from Mandalay, Sagaing, Chin, Magwe, Rakhine, Ayeyarwady, Yangon, Mon, Tanintharyi, Kachin, northern and eastern Shan, Karenni and Karen. In the period under review, the programme was joined by the Arakan Heritage Foundation which is working on behalf of Arakan health providers.

Topics discussed by participants include greater equity in healthcare provision, inclusion of all ethnicities and communities and improved service delivery.

During this period, WLATAP supported the formation of a Technical Collaborative Unit (TCU). This was one of the strategic directions decided at the Human Resources for Health workshop in the previous year (reported in WLATAPs 2023-24 report). The TCU can serve as a federal platform for governance improvement and for the modernisation of government service in healthcare.

WLATAP also supported a knowledge sharing discussion designed to prepare for the establishment of a skills laboratory and a competency-based learning environment for pre-service and in-service education and training programmes

Throughout this period, a designated trustee worked with the team to ensure a continued focus on both risk and the protection of vulnerable adults and children. We recognise that Burma is highly volatile in the aftermath of the coup.

The Board also notes specific risks around AML, ABC, ATF and the danger of aid diversion. Funds have therefore been assigned to support a Finance Manager. His role is to keep careful control over budgets and payments.

Board oversight of the project has been provided by meetings of the Project Director, the Finance Manager and the nominated trustee. Reports prepared for the donor have been shared with Board members.

Under the terms of the grant agreement with FCDO, this grant was subject to an external audit. The audit covered the period from 17 May 2023 to 31 July 2024. The audit report, published on 25 November 2024, concluded that:

“In our opinion, the financial report of WLATAP for the period 17 May 2023 to 31 July 2024 is prepared, in all material respects, in accordance with WLATAP’s accounting records and the financial reporting provisions of the contract”.

2. Research on Rohingya Muslims in Crisis

The people of Rakhine State are facing escalating and deepening humanitarian crises. Rakhine, Rohingya, Mro, Kaman – these and other ethnic groups across the country are all of them victims of violence.

The protracted conflict between junta forces loyal to Min Aung Hlaing, the Arakan Army that is in control of much of the state, and other armed groups has exacerbated especially the plight of the Rohingya, a minority group that has faced decades of persecution and displacement.

Caught in the crossfire, they continue to suffer from systemic violence, arbitrary arrests, forced conscription and severe restrictions on their freedom of movement. The political turmoil impedes any meaningful attempts at reconciliation or peacebuilding, leaving the Rohingya in a precarious and vulnerable position. The return of the Rohingya from Bangladesh to Myanmar feels far away.

And yet these same Rohingya are under the protection of the International Court of Justice, which has laid down provisional measures designed specifically to avoid the risk of further acts of genocide in Rakhine State – clearly these measures have failed.

During the reporting period, humanitarian organizations reported a drastic increase in forced recruitment activities, with numerous cases of abductions and forced conscription among young Rohingya men. Additionally, forced recruitment by armed groups has intensified, further exacerbating violence and instability in the region. These developments underscore the critical need for sustained humanitarian aid and international diplomatic pressure to mitigate the worsening conditions.

Efforts to address these issues have been hampered by the ongoing conflict and logistical challenges. The international community's response, although earnest, has not kept pace with the needs on the ground.

Supported by our FCDO donor, WLATAP has enabled the recording of human rights abuses and the preparation of documents drawing attention to the plight of the Rohingya and other marginalised groups in Rakhine.

WLATAP supported a public roundtable event at The Hague on 11 November 2024. The event was co-hosted by the International Institute of Social Studies (ISS), a renowned global graduate school specializing in policy-oriented critical social science, in collaboration with Gerard McCarthy, a professor at the ISS and a published expert on Myanmar.

This event aimed to explore solutions that can advance peace and reconciliation in Rakhine State, addressing the plight of the Rohingya and all those who call Rakhine their home. The conference brought together diplomats, legal experts, human rights activists, academics, students and the Myanmar community to foster a meaningful and productive discussion.

The primary objectives of the event were:

- a) Contextualising the violence in Rakhine State Post-Coup.
- b) Analysing the violence in Rakhine State within the broader context of Myanmar's political turmoil, focusing on how the coup has exacerbated the crisis.
- c) Presentation of new evidence on human rights abuses.
- d) Amplifying voices and agency of those having experienced human rights abuses.

3. Special Needs Education

Financial support continued for the Myanmar Special Education Association, which continues with its mission of training special needs teachers inside Myanmar. This has become incredibly difficult as a result of the ongoing civil war. However various classes were held during the year and funds spent on updating written materials and on developing a resource centre.

The intention is to keep this important initiative alive through this very challenging time with the hope that activity can then increase back to historic levels at some point in the future.
