Trustees

Mr David Skinner

Dr Austen El-Osta

Management of the charity

The day-to-day management of the ISF is the responsibility of Mr. David Skinner, President of the Charity.

A sister organisation also called the International Self-Care Foundation is registered in Hong Kong as a charity. The focus of ISF Hong Kong is China. The two organisations are fully independent of each other and have no financial links.

Public Interest

The overall aim of the International Self-Care Foundation (ISF) is the preservation of health and wellness through encouraging people (individuals and populations) to 'self-care' – that is, to adopt and maintain more healthy lifestyles.

Healthier lifestyles are urgently needed because 'lifestyle' diseases – also called noncommunicable or chronic diseases, particularly heart attack and stroke, cancer, chronic respiratory disease and diabetes – have reached epidemic proportions in most countries around the world. But lifestyle diseases are preventable – up to 80% of heart disease, stroke and type-2 diabetes, and over a third of cancers could be prevented by eliminating common risk factors, particularly tobacco use, unhealthy diet, physical inactivity and the harmful use of alcohol.

The beneficial purpose of ISF is to help prevent, delay or alter the course of preventable 'lifestyle' diseases by encouraging self-care – that is, the adoption of healthier lifestyles. 'Self-care' describes the activities involved in adopting healthy lifestyles and thereby preserving health and preventing or delaying lifestyle diseases. The WHO 1998 definition of self-care is:

'Self-Care is what people do for themselves to establish and maintain health, and to prevent and deal with illness. It is a broad concept encompassing hygiene (general and personal), nutrition (type and quality of food eaten), lifestyle (sporting activities, leisure etc), environmental factors (living conditions, social habits, etc.) socio-economic factors (income level, cultural beliefs, etc.) and self-medication.'

However, one challenge of lifestyle disease prevention is that responsibility ultimately rests with individuals, and there are many practical issues and challenges. Furthermore, being substantially outside the remit of current health and social systems, self-care has in the past lacked a champion.

The International Self-Care Foundation has therefore been formed to champion self-care around the world. In practical terms, this involves helping to develop evidence-based self-care concepts and practices and helping to promote the role of self-care in health.

The public benefit of the International Self-Care Foundation's work is significant; healthy individuals can expect to remain healthier; healthcare professionals can concentrate on more serious cases, and public healthcare budget pressures will be relieved.

In presenting this report the Trustees confirm that they have had regard to the commission's public benefit guidance in exercising their powers and duties to which the guidance is relevant.

Objectives

The stated objects of the ISF are the relief of sickness by the promotion, preservation and protection of health and wellbeing. This is based on the concept of self-care praxis, which can be defined as the maintenance of healthy lifestyles and encompasses the concepts of hygiene (general and personal), nutrition (type and quality of food eaten), lifestyle (sporting activities, leisure etc.), environmental factors (living conditions, social habits, etc.) socio-economic factors (income level, cultural beliefs, etc.) and self-medication.

The charity aims:

- To promote better health through the benefits of self-care and healthy lifestyles with a particular focus on keeping people healthy

- To advance the education of the public in preserving and protecting health by the provision of educational support and information on self-care and healthy lifestyles to individuals based on the best available evidence (particularly from the World Health Organisation) and current best practice.
- To help in the development of optimal health practices and systems, ancillary to those provided by doctors, focusing on the development of disease prevention services and activities.

Self-care describes in a practical, person-centred way what we should all be doing to maintain our health, wellness and wellbeing. Through self-care people can be healthier and remain so into old age, managing minor ailments themselves. They can also better manage, delay or even prevent the appearance of lifestyle diseases such as heart attacks, strokes, diabetes and many cancers.

Self-care also presents enormous opportunities for all other stakeholders in health and wellbeing, including healthcare professionals, health services, industry and governments. However, self-care as a concept and in practice needs worldwide development and support in order to realise its full potential. There is a fundamental need to raise the visibility of and articulate the case for self-care. There is also a fundamental need to support the development of self-care as an academic subject, to provide solid foundations and evidence-based recommendations to drive country programme implementation and policy development.

Broadly speaking, self-care is a practical, person-centred way to maintain our health, wellness and wellbeing. Through self-care, people can be healthier and remain so into old age. The Seven Pillars of Self-Care set out the fundamental activities that each of us can adopt to reduce the risk of so called 'lifestyle diseases' such as cardiovascular disease, strokes, type 2 diabetes, obesity and some types of cancers as well as taking actions to effectively deal with common, everyday self-manageable conditions.

Self-care also presents enormous opportunities for all other stakeholders in health, including healthcare professionals, health services, industry and governments. However, self-care as a concept and in practice needs worldwide development and support to realise its full potential. There is a fundamental need to raise the visibility of and articulate the case for self-care in various settings. There is also a fundamental need to support the development of self-care as an academic subject to illustrate the evidence base for self-care interventions and to provide a solid foundation for country programme implementation and policy prescriptions to promote healthy living and vitality in ageing.

The International Self-Care Foundation's (ISF) core strategy is to help develop evidence-based self-care concepts and practices, and to promote the role of self-care in health, working with other organisations as appropriate. ISF has a unique status in the self-care landscape by virtue of its specific focus on the individual self-carer, the promotion of self-care activities and R&D whilst maintaining a charitable status.

Trustees' Annual Report (Including Directors' Report)

Year Ended 31 January 2025

International Self-Care Foundation Report

In 2023, ISF embarked on a multi-year program to raise further awareness of the seven pillars of self-care. The kick-off of "Self-Care for all by 2030" began with the publication of a paper that focussed on the first pillar: Health Literacy. The plan was to focus on successive pillars each year so that ISF may build greater awareness of the value of self-care, culminating in a series of 7 reports by 2030.

In 2024, the emphasis was shifted to the second pillar of mental well-being. This publication was authored by David Skinner (ISF), Dr. El-Osta (ISF and SCARU) and Dr. Demarzo (UNIFESP). This second instalment of the Self-Care 2030 Insights Report was preceded by the publication of a feature about mental health and self-care. In addition, mental health and self-care was featured in an article by Mr. Skinner in Open Access Government's journal (read the article here).

In addition to publishing the new Self-Care 2030 report, ISF was involved in advocacy efforts in partnership with the Global Self-Care Federation and the Self-Care Trailblazers Group. ISF is also a cardinal member of The United for Self-Care Coalition which has a goal to promote efforts with the World Health Organization.

ISF was pleased to be invited to participate in numerous meetings focussing on how self-care can contribute to the reduction in noncommunicable diseases (NCDs) and make universal health care (UHC) a reality. ISF was invited to help develop self-care policy positioning for the WHO Executive Committee through the Canadian Public Health Agency.

ISF co-authored a letter addressed the Secretary of State for Health & Social Care calling on Wes Streeting with a proposal to advance self-care as a foundational pillar of public health strategy in the UK.

The growing interest in self-care internationally

Over the past year, ISF increased its social media following and engagement on all platforms and updated the website content.

Broadly speaking, self-care is a practical, person-centred way to maintain our health, wellness and wellbeing. Through self-care, people can be healthier and remain so into old age. The Seven Pillars of Self-Care set out the fundamental ways each of us can reduce the risk of so called 'lifestyle diseases' such as cardiovascular disease, stroke, type 2 diabetes, obesity and some types of cancers, as well as taking actions to effectively deal with common, everyday self-manageable conditions.

Self-care also presents enormous opportunities for all other stakeholders in health, including healthcare professionals, health services, industry and governments. However, self-care as a concept and in practice needs worldwide development and support in order to realise its full potential. There is a fundamental need to raise the visibility of and articulate the case for self-care in various settings. There is also a fundamental need to support the development of self-care as an academic subject to illustrate the evidence base for effective self-care interventions and to provide a solid foundation for country programme implementation and policy prescriptions to promote healthy living and vitality in ageing.

ISF's strategic focus continues to support the development of evidence-based self-care concepts and practices, and to promote the role of self-care in driving up empowerment, health and wellbeing, at home, in the community, in workplaces and in different setting in people from all walks of life

ISF has a unique status in the self-care landscape by virtue of its specific focus on the individual self-carer. This is a position ISF will seek to maintain as it is currently regarded as the only entity to represent and advocate for the self-carer. ISF is also recognised Internationally as a founder member of the Self-Care Academic Research Unit (SCARU) and in this way helps set the global agenda for self-care R&D whilst maintaining a charitable status.

This report is designed to provide a summary of ISF's main activities over the last year. This is primarily an internal newsletter but may be circulated externally.

International Self-Care Day 2024

International Self-Care Day \(ISD\) 24/7 is recognised by the WHO and celebrated on 24 July each year. This commemorative day was created by ISF with the sole purpose of raising the profile of self-care around the world. ISD 24/7 provides a media-friendly forum and a focus for individuals and groups to (independently) promote self-care in their organisation or community.

All stakeholders in health and wellbeing are invited to use International Self-Care Day in independent, responsible ways to progress the cause of their self-care agenda for health, wellness and wellbeing. ISF is delighted to record that International Self-Care Day continues to expand around the world involving thousands of people in many different countries. As in previous years, numerous government organizations, NGOs, academic institutions, charities, health centres, associations, enterprises and many other types of organization used this device to responsibly promote their self-care agendas during ISD 2024.

ISF continues to focus on the New Decade of Self-Care and is developing a roadmap towards selfcare for all by 2030. On ISD 2024 there were many organizations who focused their efforts on better understanding of how self-care literacy can help improve outcomes and effective use of healthcare resources.

This year there were a larger number of organizations engaged in promoting selfcare on ISD. To further provide practical tools for individuals looking to better understand what they can do for their own health, ISF continued to promote its self-care app based on the seven pillars of selfcare. The expansion of ISD to a full month through the promotion of Self-care Month by WHO showed increased messaging leading up to ISD 2024. ISF received a large number of requests and contacts seeking to use the seven pillars in their messaging during this period. The social media promotion of ISD and mental health included new media such as YouTube for getting the message out. An example of this outreach can be found here.

ISF Expands its Network

Partnerships are very important to the ability of ISF to drive messaging and actions on responsible selfcare. The long-standing relationship with SCARU continued to result in several opportunities. For example, Dr El-Osta and David Skinner participated in a number of meetings focussed on the importance of self-care and the evidence base that supports the calls for stronger national policy and greater person-centred care.

Through a persistent social media program, ISF continued to grow its follower base. Also, the number of impressions for the seven pillars of self-care rose considerably. The peak impressions coincided with the week leading to, and including, ISD as well as Self-care Week in the UK.

ISF also continued its involvement with the Selfcare Trailblazer Group and participates in their communications and advocacy programmes. This platform provides good opportunities for ISF to interact with a wide variety of organizations in this network.

The United Kingdom celebrates National Self-Care Week (SCW) in November each year and both the Selfcare Forum and the UK Consumer Healthcare Products Association (PAGB) supported ISD. Furthermore, ISF sponsored the selfcare innovation awards and served as a part of the team judging entries. There were several great projects created to support selfcare and the Selfcare Forum worked closely with ISF in creating digital materials for SCW including a further promotion of the ISF app.

ISF IN CHINA

An important driving force for improved health is the growing interest in widely available searches for self-care information, which has reached 5.5 billion times globally in 2024. In China, this figure has also surpassed 2 billion. Overall, the growth of self-care reflects a shift in the way in which health care is perceived and delivered. Governments, health care professionals and payers increasingly recognize the important role individuals play in maintaining health and well-being. By actively monitoring their health status, individuals can use self-care to improve their life quality, reduce their dependence on health-care system and ultimately contribute to the overall health and well-being of society, while improving their own life experience.

The WHO issued 2024 Global Thematic Report - "Nothing for us, without us". The report emphasizes the serious threat of NCDs and mental illnesses faced by the world, and explains that the main way to reduce these diseases and maintain mental health should come from self-care.

On July 24, 2024, the 13th 724 International Self-Care Day was sponsored by China Nonprescription Medicines Association and Xinhua Client "Xinhua Big Health", and co-organized by International Self-Care Foundation, and supported by China Nutrition and Health Food Association, China Pharmaceutical News and Information Association and more. The event was broadcast live through Xinhua client, PC and other media platforms, with nearly ten million viewers worldwide.

In China, the theme of 2024 International Self-Care Day was "Nothing for us, without us".

Important guests of the event include:

- Mr. Mao Qun'an, Vice President of Chinese Hospital Association, former Deputy Director of Patriotic Health Campaign Committee Office and the Office of the Committee for the Promotion of Healthy China Action, former Director of the Department of Planning, Development and Informatization of the National Healthcare Commission.
- Mr. Bian Zhenjia, President of China Nutrition and Health Food Association.
- Mr. Bai Huiliang, former President of China Nonprescription Medicines Association.
- Ms. Liu Pei, former Director of the Department of Policies and Regulations of the State Drug Administration.
- Mr. Zhang Wei, President of China Society for Drug Regulation.
- Mr. Shen Jingwang, Vice President of China News of Drug Information Association.
- Mr. Wang Ao, Vice President and Secretary General of China Nonprescription Medicines Association.
- Ms. Gao Yingying, Deputy Editor-in-Chief of Xinhua Client. and
- Ms. Jia Jia, Secretary General of the International Self-Care Foundation Greater China.

In China, health and wellness is an important cultural tradition, and an expression of self-care, which brings together the great wisdom of the Chinese people and has become one of the most important means of preventing disease and strengthening the body. At the same time, we are pleased to see that in recent years, the national health-related government, industry organizations, enterprises, and professionals have been making active efforts, especially the establishment of the International Self-Care Day and its continuous promotion, so that the public not only has the concept of self-care, but also is trying to obtain government policy guidance and support to continue to accumulate the scientific methods of self-care. At the same time, the related enterprises also follow the public's demand and provide high-quality health products and services to society, so as to better satisfy people's health needs. The persistent efforts of society to realize this goal are at the core of achieving the goal of a healthy China.

ISF China held a very successful conference and participated in several other national initiatives including:

- 2024 International Self-Care Day - Bayer Healthcare's "First Step to Health" program – Pharmacist in my store
- 2024 International Self-Care Day - Baheal Pharma "Science of growing taller" program
- 2024 International Self-Care Day - Tianjin Pharmaceutical Da Ren Tang "Chinese heart, Healthy action" Program

- 2024 International Self-Care Day – Guilong Pharmaceutical “Welfare activities on Teacher’s Day” Program
- 2024 International Self-Care Day - Qizheng Tibetan Medicine Public Welfare Program “Protect Our Hearts Together”
- 2024 International Self-Care Day – Wedge “Early 1,000 Days of Life” Care Action Project
- 2024 International Self-Care Day – Changshou Pharmaceutical “Good Night Action” Program

THE SEVEN PILLARS OF SELF-CARE FRAMEWORK

The Seven Pillars of Self-Care are described in better detail on the ISF web site.

Each pillar describes in middle-range terms a set of activities that every individual should undertake; collectively the 7 pillars describe the entirety of self-care from the perspective of the self-carer.

Over the last few years, the 7 Pillars of Self-Care Framework has proved to be comprehensive, robust, practical and easily accessible tool that could be used by organisations and people from all walks of life. But the 7 pillars framework is more than just a visual diagram; it can be used as a framework to list specific activities for self-carers, selfcare support tasks for healthcare professionals, barriers, policies and much else.

THE WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION (WHO)

The WHO continues its work in the self-care space, namely by advocating for self-care as a key enabler of UHC. Whilst the focus thus far remains on self-care to promote health & wellbeing in the context of sexual and reproductive health & rights, there is a clarion call for the global self-care movement to now advance new guidelines for self-care for NCDs.

Crucially, it is also not understood that some countries (e.g. Brazil) are more inclined toward a universal health access as opposed to universal health coverage. Nevertheless, the work of WHO is very important to support the growing global interest in self-care.

Mr. Skinner & Dr. El-Osta continue to support WHO in their publication pipeline. The consortium is now also developing 3 papers earmarked for publication in The Lancet on International Self-Care Day.

WHO Publications

ISF ACADEMIC PARTNERSHIPS

ISF is a unique organisation in the self-care space and as a charity we can work independently and supportively with other parties such as government departments, academia, charities, healthcare professional bodies, and others. Examples of ISF partnering with academia during 2024 include:

Imperial College London Self-Care Academic Research Unit (SCARU)

The Self-Care Academic Research Unit \(SCARU\) was launched in 2017 & remains as the only university academic unit in the world dedicated specifically to the study of self-care. SCARU is a tripartite collaboration between Imperial College London School of Primary Care & Public Health, ISF and the UK Self-Care Forum. SCARU's is already recognised as the academic home of self-care internationally.

SCARU was part of a European consortium of partners that collectively sought €4m funding envelope from the EU Horizon Public Health Workstream for Primary Prevention and Self-Management of NCDs. ISF supported the application by providing a letter of support which was included in the pack. The outcome of the competitive proposal is expected in April 2025.

The Seven Pillars of Self-Care Study

ISF discussed plans to commission the Seven Pillars of Self-Care Study which will offer a novel and comprehensive approach to investigating self-care practices among community-dwelling adults, focusing on the knowledge, attitudes and behaviours related to the seven pillars defined by ISF. This study will fill critical gaps in existing research by examining how individuals engage with self-care in everyday life, particularly in non-clinical settings. While previous studies have explored self-care in isolated contexts (e.g., specific health behaviours or conditions), this study is unique in its holistic approach, evaluating all seven pillars concurrently to understand their interrelationships.

By assessing self-care across diverse demographic groups, the study will provide insights into how socio-economic, cultural and educational factors influence self-care practices. This will allow for the development of tailored interventions that address the unique barriers and facilitators experienced by different population segments. The findings will be particularly valuable for policymakers, healthcare providers and public health professionals seeking to design evidence-based, community-level interventions that promote healthier lifestyles.

In addition, the study's emphasis on self-care literacy and behaviours will contribute to the growing field of health literacy, advancing our understanding of how individuals interpret and apply health information in real-world settings. By generating robust, actionable data, this study will inform future research and practice in self-care, health promotion and preventive healthcare, ultimately supporting efforts to reduce healthcare costs and improve population health outcomes globally.

The study is expected to launch in March, with the report & papers earmarked for dissemination in time for ISD 2025.

INTERNATIONAL CENTRE FOR SELF-CARE RESEARCH

The International Centre for Self-Care Research \(ICSCR\) is a virtual centre focused on research into the health maintenance, monitoring, and management activities done by individuals and their families to deal with chronic illness. The number of people with chronic illness is burgeoning worldwide due to the aging population and unhealthy lifestyles. Self-care becomes increasingly important and complex as chronic illness develops. The vision of the Centre is a world where self-care is prioritized by individuals, families, and communities and is the first line of approach in every health care encounter. The mission of the Centre is to lead the self-care research endeavour, improving conceptual clarity and promoting interdisciplinary work informed by a shared vision. Toward this goal, the ICSCR is currently conducting an interdisciplinary, international study of the relationship between symptoms and self-care management behaviours in adults with chronic illness. A secondary aim is to explore how everyday factors drive decision-making about symptoms and self-care behaviours.

ISF & the SelfCare Journal

ISF's strategic relationship with the peer-reviewed online academic journal SelfCare (<http://selfcarejournal.com>) continues. At the moment, too few of the many self-care initiatives around the world are scientifically designed, evaluated and published. Developing self-care programme design and assessments, coupled with the potential to publish case studies in SelfCare Journal, represents a major opportunity for the future.

Self-Care for All by 2030

During this new decade of selfcare ISF will continue to work in collaboration with a wide mix of international stakeholders to support the Foundation's commitment to the promotion of selfcare and to building the evidence base for its value to individuals, communities and society.

The Foundation will continue to support those who are active in promoting selfcare's role in health and those who are involved in research to build the evidence for selfcare's value to healthcare and individuals.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Results for the period

A summary of results for the year is given on page 18 of this report.

Total income in the year was £52,093 (2024: £50,371) and total expenditure for the year was £68,487 (2024: £22,346) giving a deficit in the year of £16,394 (2024: surplus of £28,025).

Expenditure on charitable activity for the period was £56,643 (2024: £20,533) being 82.7% (2024: 91.9%) of expenditure. Governance costs were £11,844 (2024: £1,813), being 17.3% (2024: 8.1%) of expenditure. The expenditure ratios are skewed in the current year due to some additional legal and professional fees in the current year.

Unrestricted reserves of £103,774 (2024: £120,168) are carried over to the following financial year with a decrease in reserves due to the higher expenditure in the current year.

The Trustees gave their time freely to ISF and received no remuneration. No connected persons received any benefit or remuneration from ISF.

Expectations for the coming year

At the present burn rate ISF has sufficient funding for current activity levels, programmes and commitments in the coming year. There are no funding shortfalls or material commitments of concern for the coming year. Having illustrated the contribution that ISF can make to health and self-care, the objective in the coming year is to secure future funding and expand activities in line with the potential opportunities.

Fundraising remains an issue and a challenge. Expansion of the commercial donor base and grants from foundations, entrepreneurs or philanthropists remains the preferred approach for the future.

Other financial matters based on this which will need to be addressed include developing ISF's risk management and reserves policy.

Risk management and reserves policy

The Trustees considers that the major risk at this stage of development of the ISF relates to the financial sustainability of the ISF. Other risks are considered minor and manageable.

The Trustees agreed to defer discussion of financial sustainability until progress has been made in fundraising discussions with potential funders. Therefore the current level of reserves is considered appropriate by the trustees.

The address of the registered office is given in the charity information on page 2 of these financial statements. The nature of the charity's operations and principal activities are given in the Trustees' Annual Report (including Directors' Report).

2. STATEMENT OF COMPLIANCE

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with Accounting and Reporting by Charities: Statement of Recommended Practice applicable to charities preparing their accounts in accordance with the Financial Reporting Standard applicable to the UK and Republic of Ireland (FRS102), the Companies Act 2006 and the Charities Act 2011.

3. ACCOUNTING POLICIES

The financial statements have been prepared under the historic cost convention. The financial statements are presented in sterling (£) which is also the functional currency of the company. The company meets the definition of a public benefit entity under FRS 102.

A summary of the significant accounting policies applied in the preparation of these accounts are set out below

(a) Incoming Resources

All incoming resources are included on the Statement of Financial Activities when recognised in the period in which the charity is legally entitled to the income and the amount can be quantified with reasonable accuracy.

As provided in the SORP (FRS 102) no amount is included in the financial statements for volunteer time.

(b) Expenditure recognition

All expenditure is accounted for on an accruals basis and has been classified under headings that aggregate all costs related to that category. Expenditure is recognised where there is a legal or constructive obligation to make payments to third parties, it is probable that the settlement will be required and the amount of the obligation can be measured reliably.
