The Trustees and Officers present their report on the activities of INSS for the year ending 31 January 2024.

Report of the Chair

Dr Joan Walton

This is the first time I have contributed as Chair to the Annual Report, having taken that role over from Dr David Rousseau in January 2023. I would like to give my thanks and great appreciation to David for what he achieved during his time as Chair, leading the committee in a time of transition for INSS, including achieving Charitable status, changing our name and the Articles, and taking us to a point where we could move into the future in a positive way.

The year 2023-2024 was an active one, with an in-person conference taking place in May 2023, the establishing of an initiative to encourage new people to become actively involved in helping to develop INSS as an organisation, the transition of editorship of the Journal for the Study of Spirituality, the continuation of three Special Interest Groups, other participative online activities such as the Conversational, and ongoing discussions with Taylor & Francis with the aim of improving the benefits emerging from our relationship with them. More details on each of these are included in this report.

Conference

The major event during the year was the Seventh International Conference INSS conference held in Waterford, Ireland from 16th to 18th May 2023, on the theme of 'Spirituality, Critical Reflection, and Professional Practice in an Uncertain World'. The event was excellently co-ordinated by Michael O'Sullivan, who led a team which resulted in a conference that was fully subscribed, and a great success socially, academically and financially. The main public and keynote presentations were given by Dr Cheryl Hunt, University of Exeter, UK ; Professor Jonathan M. Wooding, University of Sydney, Australia, Professor John Swinton, University of Aberdeen, UK. Dr Niamh Brennan, Independent Scholar and Author, Ireland, and Dr Michael O'Sullivan, South East Technological University, Waterford, Ireland. More information about these presentations are to be found on the INSS website.

Plans almost immediately began for the next conference, to be held at Northampton University in 2025. Louise Spiers is to act as Conference Co-ordinator for this event, and an organising committee was established in January 2024. The title of the conference on this occasion is to be Spirituality, Consciousness, Technology, and Wellbeing: Implications for Research, Education and Practice.

Operational Group

A major initiative during the year was to put a call-out to people interested in being involved in the future development of INSS. This resulted in a Focus Group being held in December 2023, attended by 8 people willing to discuss potential new roles. A number of suggestions were made, one being the creation of a new Special Interest Group in Spirituality and Education, which has since been initiated. A further outcome was an Operational Group under the excellent leadership of Professor Melanie Rogers, which is now meeting on a regular basis, and is generating good ideas for moving forward as an organisation.

Technical and operational support

In March 2023, Armando Lüscher was appointed Digital Infrastructure Manager, and co-opted to the Executive Committee. Throughout the year, Armando has provided an invaluable service, offering technical support when required, and helping to improve the website. In January 2024, Julie Billingham stood down from co-option to the Executive Committee, but has offered to continue to support the committee on an ad hoc basis if required. I thank Julie for the contribution she has made to technical and operational support, and her willingness to continue to be responsive to need.

Special Interest Groups

Three Special Interest Groups continued throughout the year. The first one to be initiated was the 'Spirituality and Consciousness' SIG, which in fact came to a planned close early in 2024. Their experience throughout the 2+ years that it ran was shared in a Galileo Commission Summit held in May 2024, during which each participant spoke about the learning they had gained through the time of the monthly meetings. This was no doubt a significant subject to explore, and will be developed in different contexts as INSS evolves.

The Spirituality and Arts SIG continues to be successful, with Annalisa Burello, June Boyce-Tillman and Lila Moore as Chairs. Spirituality, Mental Health and Wellbeing is also flourishing, with Katja Milner and Jill Buckeldee as Chairs. I would like to thank all the chairs, and the supporting members of the Executive Committee, for enabling these SIGs to be the success that they are.

Journal Editorship

Dr Cheryl Hunt, our Journal's Chief Editor, indicated in her previous report her wish to pass her role to Professors Wilf McSherry and Linda Ross in early 2023. They worked together in 2022 to ensure a smooth transition, and Cheryl worked with our publisher, Taylor & Francis, to enable us to use their online submission and review management system, which should make it practical for a team of two Co-Chief Editors to manage the editorial workflow.

In May 2023, Wilf and Linda formally took over the roles as co-Chief Editors of the Journal for the Study of Spirituality. Cheryl had with great effectiveness undertaken the role of Chief Editor since its inception, and her role in enabling it to thrive successfully is deeply appreciated. Taylor & Francis have offered us an online submission management system, which has experienced some problems in the initial stages, but great effort is going into making this a more efficient system for receiving and reviewing articles.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Co-optation to the Execs

In addition to Armando Lüscher and Helen McSherry, the Directors co-opted Louise Spiers as Conference Co-ordinator and Katja Milner as Membership Secretary. They are all contributing a significant amount to the flourishing of INSS, and I would like to thank them for it. I would also like to thank all members of the Executive Committee for the time they give INSS, and for helping to make it the successful organisation it deserves to be.

Report of the Honorary Treasurer

Mrs Helen McSherry

We have had another good year financially. Our main income being from the conference held in the middle of the year in Waterford, Ireland. The 2023 Conference made a profit of just over £8,300 with the help of sponsorship by SpIRE and a SETU research grant. Membership fees of £7,031 were received and we paid Taylor and Francis the sum of £3,825 for the publishing of the Journal. Receipts from the Special Interest Group meeting registration fees has grown by £104 to £248. Although not received within this financial year, £4,558 of 2023 royalties from Taylor and Francis for the Journal have been included in this year's accounts as payment due, and this amount has been received by us since the end of our fiscal year.

Our administrative expenses of £956 have increased this year due to the conference, to include costs for our website, marketing and promotional work. Our PayPal facility expense decreased from £812 to £307 as most of the activity for the Conference was incurred last year. Our net income for the year was £12,506.

Our bank balance at the end of the financial year (31 January 2024) was a healthy £75,538.

Report of the Membership Secretary

Dr Katja Milner

I was delighted to be invited onto the INSS Executive Committee as Membership Secretary in December 2023. Membership for the end of the last financial year was a total of 177, made up of 129 Standard members, 46 Honorary members (those on INSS Executive and/or the Editorial Board for the 'Journal for the Study of Spirituality') and 2 Honorary members also subscribed. Membership figures for the previous year on 31st January 2023 were 224 in total, made up of 179 standard and 45 honorary members, indicating a small decline in membership over last year. INSS attracts membership from across a wide variety of countries internationally including UK, Europe, North America, Australasia, Asia Pacific, South Africa, Eastern Europe and Latin America.

Over the course of this year, the INSS team have been looking at developing ways to promote the organisation and attract new membership. This has resulted in the introduction of a new concessionary rate for students and those with lower incomes. These have been recently promoted through the creation of new INSS leaflets by Cheryl and the presence of INSS at conferences and events such as the recent Eurotas 24 conference. Cheryl and Armando's streamlining of the INSS website also offers a central and informative hub for members. As well as clearly outlining INSS activities, events and SIGs, further potentials are being explored to create platforms for displaying relevant work of members, such as the thesis abstract page.

Additionally, Katja and Armando, with support from Julie, have been working on streamlining the membership management system in light of recent requirements and to leverage new opportunities.

Report of the Research and Scholarship Co-ordinator

Dr Cheryl Hunt, University of Exeter, UK

I agreed to take on the role of Research and Scholarship Co-ordinator as from January 2024, and to attempt to scope the role after stepping down as Chief Editor of the Journal for the Study of Spirituality (JSS) in May 2023. Having seen the production of Issue 13.1 of the journal through to completion, I remain an Executive Editor and liaised closely with the new Co-Editors-in-Chief, Prof. Linda Ross and Prof. Wilf McSherry during the transition period. Together with Dr David Rousseau and Prof. Roderick Hunt (external consultant with expertise in publishing contracts and working with the Charity Commission), I was also heavily involved in negotiating a new contract between INSS and Taylor & Francis (T&F), the publishers of JSS. The negotiations were successfully concluded in October 2023 when INSS assumed sole ownership of the JSS title (hitherto it had been jointly owned with the publisher).

As part of my Research and Scholarship scoping exercise, it became clear that, in order to encourage the involvement of students and independent scholars, INSS needed to be able to offer them a reduced membership fee. I therefore negotiated an addendum to the JSS contract whereby we are now able to offer a concessionary annual membership fee of £25 to students and others on a low income which includes online-only access to the journal.

I also updated many of the content pages on the INSS website and, on the recommendation of our Digital Infrastructure Manager, Armando Luscher, created a 'News' column on the Homepage to highlight forthcoming events. In the process, it became evident that, because both the website and our various activities have developed organically over many years, there was a lack of clarity about how they fitted together and, therefore, about their combined contribution to the field of spirituality studies.

In consequence, I prepared a discussion document for consideration by the Executive Committee to inform future planning. It highlighted the many achievements of BASS/INSS since its early beginnings in 2008 and how these relate to our Charitable Objectives, as well as some aspects of our work which we have yet to develop fully; for example, how research in the field of spirituality studies may be used to influence policy, not only at institutional levels but in the wider political arena.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

The discussion about future planning took place in February 2024 so, together with the developments that have taken place since, it falls outside the reporting period for this Annual Report. Nevertheless, I include a summary of some of those developments here since they are already helping to shape the future of INSS and its contribution to research and scholarship in the field.

In brief, INSS has four key strands to its mission to develop the field of spirituality studies:

1. Journal of Spirituality Studies (JSS);
2. Biennial international conferences;
3. Ongoing scholarly activities;
4. The provision of scholarly information about relevant materials and links to other organisations and events.

With Armando's help, the structure of the website has now been changed to better reflect these strands (though there is much more still to do!).

In terms of the 'Activities' strand, for historical reasons there was some confusion about the relationship between the Spirituality Scholars Network (SSN) and the Special Interest Groups (SIGs), including whether the SSN was a SIG in its own right, and who might be entitled to attend events hosted by the various groups. I have worked closely with Prof. Melanie Rogers, our SSN & SIG Co-ordinator, to try to resolve these matters.

Although there is an inevitable overlap between activities, in essence we see the function of the SSN as two-fold:

- (i) to provide support and encouragement to scholars and researchers, especially those relatively new to the field, and/or to those who are undertaking research independently or in institutions where few others are working in the field of spirituality; and
- (ii) to facilitate collaborative working between members across institutions, for example in developing research proposals and/or accounts of good practice. By contrast, the SIGs have tended to arise out of particular interests of members, mainly those already established in their own disciplines and professions. In consequence, they provide networking opportunities for more experienced researchers and practitioners (as well as those new to the field) and the space to explore specific topics and related methodological approaches in greater depth in a safe environment that is not always available in institutional contexts.

With Melanie, I have been instrumental in establishing a new 'Operational Group' comprised of SIG Chairs and others involved in developing our 'Activities' strand. Armando Luscher and Annalisa Burello (Co-chair of the Spirituality and the Arts SIG) have both been working with the operational group to enable members to further develop information on the INSS webpages relating to the SIGs, to streamline enrolment in events, and to enable SIG members to list and share personal/professional interests if they wish to do so.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

With regard to the 'Provision of scholarly information' strand, I am pleased to say that Dr Katja Milner has agreed to undertake a funded project to develop a webpage which will include abstracts of recently, or soon to be, completed doctoral theses; and we are also exploring the possibility of developing another webpage listing INSS members' recent academic publications. These will provide a valuable resource highlighting new and ongoing work and publications in the field of spirituality studies - and will complement the webpage containing the impressive and ever-growing list of publications reviewed in JSS (collated by Assoc. Prof. Robyn Wrigley-Carr). I have also recently initiated a page showing forthcoming events provided by INSS associates to provide an additional dimension to our well-established 'Links' page which is co-ordinated by Dr Michael O'Sullivan. Discussions are currently taking place about the possibility of developing a YouTube channel to host video recordings of keynote lectures from INSS conferences and other video materials generated by SIGs.

I conclude with an outline of suggested 'ways forward' in relation to our Activities and Information strands that I presented to the Executive Committee in February:

SSN (support / networking)	SIGs (topic focused / in-depth discussion) (members decide whether open/closed; could be a mix, inc some sessions open to wider public)	Guest lectures (poss open to public) (poss with a partner org)	Web-based developments (open access but based on member input) a. Thesis page b. Members' recent publications c. Academic progs assoc with spirituality d. Events (conferences etc) e. Members' collaborative research projects
Symposia; 'Conversational'; Combined events with similar student groups (eg SMN, Alef)	Workshops (share resources/best practice) Collaborative research projects (arranged independently by members)

Some, as noted, have already been implemented. I hope to report on the successful development of others in due course.

Report of the Co-Chief Editors of the Journal

Prof. Linda Ross & Prof. Wilf McSherry

Background

This is the first Annual Report that we have jointly compiled for the Journal for the Study of Spirituality (JSS) since we formally assumed the role as Co-editors-in-Chief on 17th May 2023 at the INSS International Conference in Waterford, Ireland. This Report covers the period 17th May 2023 to 16th October 2024. The figures presented in this report are taken from the JSS publishers Report received on 3rd October 2024.

An update on the transfer of editorship and the transition period

The transfer of editorship from Dr Cheryl Hunt to us coincided with a shift from a manual system of administering and co-ordinating manuscripts submitted to the Journal to an online platform. The system provided by Taylor and Francis is the ScholarOne submissions system.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

This was a significant moment for the ongoing management of the journal meaning that everything was managed electronically within one system. While this was a very welcome step it did present with some significant technical challenges and issues around developing the technical/digital competence of the newly appointed Editors-in-Chief of the Journal. It also resulted in a significant increase in the number of submissions requiring screening and review.

The challenge of identifying reviewers and the processes involved in the administration of this task consumes a significant amount of both editors' time. We have undertaken several strategies to try and reduce this activity but despite these the process in some instances can still be quite protracted.

There have also been some technical challenges that have impacted on the submission and review processes of manuscripts which has resulted in a lengthy delay from submission to final decision. The help received from the different teams within Taylor and Francis has been inconsistent but sometimes helpful.

Submission and Production Targets

Global reach & usage

The number of institutional subscriptions is at its highest (2834 in 2023).

The number of downloads is at its highest at just over 19,000 at August 2024, almost 2,000 higher than at the same timepoint in 2023. So far for 2024 the downloads are mainly from North America followed by Europe and then Asia.

No of articles submitted & turnaround time & production

The number of submissions for 2024 (n=119) has already outstripped the total papers submitted in the whole of 2023 (n=102); the highest number of submissions were from India followed by Iran.

The acceptance rate remains steady at 11% (for 2023/24) and the majority of articles are research papers.

Most papers submitted in 2023 received a first decision within 29 days, and the average speed of publication following acceptance is now at its highest, 20 days in 2024 compared with 71 days in 2017.

The move to the online Scholar One system probably accounts for these positive changes.

Top performing papers were as follows

Top downloaded article 'The perceived link between dreams and the spiritual life: an exploratory study' by Vasile et al (2023). (3845 downloads in last 12 months)

Top cited article & top altmetric score 'Spirituality & economics' by Zsolnai, (2022) (8 citations last 12 months, altmetric score 6)

Highest altmetric score (10) in the last year was 'Reflections on a global 'Groundhog Day' by Hunt (2021).

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Metrics

At the 2022 conference we were pleased to report a first ever Impact Factor for the Journal of 1.4. This dropped to 0.7 in 2023 following changes in the way this figure is calculated, affecting all journals.

The Scopus CiteScore has steadily increased year on year from 0.6 in 2018 to 2.5 in 2023, and the Journal has jumped from 78th place (out of 484) to 20th place (out of 644) religious studies journals in 2023.

Author satisfaction

Author overall satisfaction and satisfaction with reviewers has remained fairly stable since 2020 at around 90%.

Editorial Board

A unique feature of INSS is the breadth of disciplines included in its 'study of spirituality', for example, health & wellbeing, economics, social sciences, religious studies, business, education, arts, humanities. This results in a kaleidoscope of fascinating papers with something for everyone. However, it also makes it difficult to find suitable experts to review the papers. We, therefore, appeal to you to consider joining our Editorial Board where you would be invited to review around 3 papers per year. As a small 'thank you' you would have free on-line access to the journal including back issues. We are in particular need of experts in spirituality and psychiatry, arts and business, bibliometrics, counselling, theology, Asian philosophies and practices, religious studies and world religions. We would also welcome new members to the International Editorial Board with expertise in statistical methods.

Final Words

We are pleased that since taking over the editorship of the journal we have met the required targets of 4 issues. We are delighted to be building up a reserve of manuscripts for future issues which should speed up the production process going forward.

In summary the transition to an online submission system has been a testing and turbulent time for editors and authors alike with several 'teething' problems and 'gremlins' that have impacted quite negatively upon the quality and experience of the submission, review and production processes. Despite these challenges most authors in the 'Authors Survey' indicated they were very satisfied with their experience.

We would like to end this report by extending a special thank you to all our International Editorial Board Members who have provided us with incredible support and all the guest reviewers who have given so generously of their time and expertise. A special thank you to our Book Reviews editor Robyn Wrigley-Carr and Social Media Editor Sophie MacKenzie for their commitment and support with each volume. Without all this collective effort it would be impossible to sustain the production and high standard of the journal.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Report of the Links Co-ordinator & Conference 2023 Co-ordinator

Dr Michael O'Sullivan

Outreach to other academic organisations in the field of spirituality studies continued in 2023, seeking to establish links for mutual co-operations and promotion. The main way this was done in 2023 was through the 7th biennial conference of INSS in May of that year. The Links Coordinator served as the lead organiser and Chair of the conference. It was the first time the conference was held outside the UK and it drew more than 150 delegates from 25 countries and 5 continents. There were over 80 presentations and the feedback from the conference shows that it was an outstanding success.

In his capacity as the Executive Director of the Spirituality Institute for Research and Education (SpIRE) and Emeritus Senior Lecturer and founding member of the Spirituality in Society and the Professions (SpirSoP) Research Group at South East Technological University in Waterford, Ireland, where the conference was held, the Links Coordinator was able to involve colleagues from these entities and to establish links between them and INSS. In 2023 in his capacity as the administrator of the SpIRE website and social media and as editor of SpIRE's online newsletter he was also able to draw attention to the work of INSS and disseminate information about its journal, Journal for the Study of Spirituality, for which he serves as a member of the Editorial Board. During the year he also included his customary piece about INSS in the SpIRE Annual Report which he prepares and produces, and brought the work of colleagues in INSS and the many activities of INSS to the attention of his postgraduate students.

Report of the Spirituality Scholars' Network and SIGs Co-ordinator

Prof. Melanie Rogers

The Spirituality Scholars' Network (SSN) offers events to INSS members and interested scholars with support from Sophie MacKenzie, Cheryl Hunt, and Alex Pimor. The SSN team meets every 2 months to discuss how to develop and engage members. This year we have instigated an operational group which includes Special Interest Group and Conversational representatives to meet every 3-4 months to plan all events for INSS. The SSN aims to support postgraduate, early career researchers and scholars in sharing their interests, experiences, and projects in the field of spirituality studies. Sophie continues to post regularly on social media.

In 2022 we launched "The Conversational" led by Alex Pimor to give time and space within which scholars of spirituality in the broadest sense join to share and discuss thoughts, ideas, theories and practices in deeper and more meaningful conversations on a wide range of topics of interests. This initiative has been very successful in terms of attendance and engagement with 15-20 INSS members attending each event. In 2023, we held 3 Conversational sessions, as planned (March, June and November). In 2024, 5 Conversationals have been scheduled (March,

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

July, October, and 2 in November). The sessions are advertised via emails and on the INSS website.

We have three Special Interest Groups (SIG) running at the moment. The Spirituality and Consciousness SIG closed in the summer after running as a closed group for 18 months. The experiences of this SIG were presented at the Galileo Commission in May 2024. The recording is available here: <https://vimeo.com/showcase/11168831>

The Spirituality and Education Special Interest Group:

The Spirituality and Education Special Interest Group (SEDSIG) is co-chaired by Professor Sara Horton-Deutsch and Dr Patricia Carlisle. The group held its first meeting online in May 2024 and we have met on two occasions, spending time sharing our interests and getting to know each other. The SEDSIG welcomes participation from those interested in the interplay of spirituality and education in all its diversity - from early childhood education to adult and higher education, as well as in professional contexts, voluntary organization, and community settings. We aim to enable participants to explore how spirituality relates to varied but complementary interests in practices, theories, and policies associated with education, teaching, and learning throughout the life course.

Through discussion between the co-chairs and Executive members we identified the value of moving into a new phase of development which continues to value building relationship whilst also welcoming speakers to present their interest regarding the interplay of spirituality and education. In the interests of keeping the SEDSIG inclusive and to support its development, we welcome diverse forms of inquiry, from evolving ideas to established works. Our next gathering in October will invite those present to explore the development of the SEDSIG to engage and discover our collective interests in this field of interest. Through this process we will invite individuals to consider sharing their work in future meetings.

Spirituality Mental Health and Wellbeing Special Interest Group:

The Mental Health and Wellbeing Special Interest Group had its first meeting in September 2022. It meets 4 - 5 times each year and focusses on exploring spirituality, mental health and wellbeing in the context of research, scholarship, healthcare and therapeutic practice. It works as a co-created safe space which welcomes diversity. Each meeting has a topic and following a short presentation the group is encouraged to reflect together and discuss pertinent themes and issues, as well as skill-share and inspire ideas and learning. Recent topics have included 'Nurturing, Self-care and Spirituality', 'Finding Hope in Existential Crises', 'Meaning making in Spirituality and Mental Health', 'Religious Disaffiliation' and 'Epistemic Injustice in Spiritual and Mental Health Contexts'. The group is attended by an average of 15 people per session which supports a diverse, inspiring and friendly atmosphere for discussion, sharing and community networking.

Spirituality and the Arts SIG:

The Special Interest Group focussing on 'Spirituality and the Arts' (SASIG) has been meeting since 2022. The SASIG events provide a platform for artists, wellbeing practitioners and scholars to showcase their work and research projects, and to engage in a discourse that encourages the exploration of the arts in a broad spiritual context. At the heart of SASIG there is a quest that seeks to explore a variety of relationships between the arts and spirituality. From 2024 we will also plan to hold open discussions quarterly for members to dialogue with one another.

From February 2023 until September 2024, the SASIG has hosted nine scholarly talks on diverse topics, presented by a range of speakers with unique perspectives and areas of expertise, as follows in chronological order:

Prof. Louis Lagana from the University of Malta lectured on his research about Malta's Neolithic temples and gave some explanations and interpretations regarding the theory that worship of a 'Mother Goddess' existed in Malta more than 5,000 years ago. This theory is based on the number of figurines found in different temples on the islands.

Continuing our series of talks inspired by the four spiritual elements of Fire, Air, Water, and Earth, the artist Alison Churchill gave a talk about Water as a Spiritual Medium based on a 10-year journey of investigation through art and Zen calligraphy practice. In addition to stills of her art pieces and installations, she shared her water-inspired videos captured on her camera phone.

Dr Karel James Bouse's talk, "Expressive Arts in Shamanic Practice," presented a multidisciplinary analysis of the function and presence of expressive arts in traditional shamanic cultures and contemporary Neo-shamanic practices.

Annalia Burrello, MSc, discussed Marina Abramović's retrospective at the Royal Academy, focusing on the theme of The Artist as Shaman. Annalisa explained how Abramović's performance art became a ritualistic and healing shamanic practice.

Prof. Rina Arya gave a talk entitled: "Locating Religion in Contemporary Art". Rina argued that the place of religion in the context of contemporary art is fraught and complex and discussed three prominent ways in which religion is explored in contemporary art: in sociopolitics, in art that transgresses, and in the creation of spaces of contemplation, some of which may be 'religious'.

Dr Lila Moore's talk was based on her practice-based PhD in Dance on Screen, which she completed in 2001 at Middlesex University. She presented a thematic analysis of the film Gaia Mysterious Rhythms and the concept of "Screen-Dance as a Novel Art Form and Rite of Passage." She demonstrated a young woman's dance film rite as a spiritual, healing, and transformative journey inspired by ancient and contemporary mythopoetic, imaginal and magickal images and themes. Video clips from the film accompanied her talk.

Singer-songwriter Siân Brown, MSc, explored the topic: "Can therapeutic songwriting be a form of subtle activism?" She presented songs from her music album inspired by Anne Baring's book The Dream of the Cosmos: A Quest for the Soul. She discussed her creative process as she moved through the book's six sections, producing two songs per section.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Prof. June Boyce-Tillman presented Hildegard of Bingen with vivid illustrations, historical and theological reflections, and vocal demonstrations. The talk was in lieu of Prof. Fay Brauer's talk, which was postponed to the fall. We thank June for filling in at the last minute.

Our last talk in 2024 was by Prof. Fay Brauer, who presented "Composing Symmorphies": Annie Besant's Theosophies, František Kupka's Chromatic Music, and Their Astral Visions." Brauer discussed Kupka's paintings in the context of his magnetic and mediumistic experiences as they resonated with Annie Besant's Man and his Bodies, C. W. Leadbeater's The Astral Plane, and their jointly authored Thought Forms.

In addition, since January 2023, the SASIG has hosted six provocations and open discussions on the theme of The Arts as Spirituality. One of these was a provocation entitled "Reconciling Humanistic vs Pan-psychic Spirituality," a conversation between Annalisa Burello and Degard. They presented and discussed their different conceptions and experiences of spirituality based on scholarly research and artistic practice.

From the outset, our goal was to provide a platform for artists, wellbeing practitioners and scholars to showcase their work and research projects, and to engage in a discourse that encourages the exploration of the arts in a broad spiritual context. This year, we have continued to provide supportive presentation contexts for artists, and the outcome of Siân Brown's presentation is a case study, demonstrating the potential effectiveness of our framework. The recording of Siân Brown's SASIG presentation generated significant interest in her work and led her to begin recording the Anne Baring album with an excellent female producer. Moreover, after many attempts, she was finally able to secure an Arts Council of Ireland grant to fund the professional production of her album. It is, therefore, a case study demonstrating the valuable support of our SASIG setting, including the YouTube video channel, which, based on the scholarly and creative assets of the presentations, can function as a unique scholarly archive for the arts and the spiritual.

Report of the JSS Book Reviews Editor

Assoc. Prof. Robyn Wrigley-Carr

Since the last AGM I have concluded eight book reviews for JSS – four in Issue 14.1 and four in Issue 14.2. The reviews cover spirituality in relation to: narrative therapy, architectural education, philosophy and sustainable development policy. Reviews also explore these broad topics: mysticism, situating spirituality in context, practice and power, extraordinary experiences of the afterlife, and varieties of spiritual experience.

Report of the Digital Infrastructure Manager

Mr Armando Lüscher

From the website point of view, one of the bigger changes that is happening now, is that the SIGs are moving to the dedicated events feature provided by Wild Apricot (our website hosting service provider). This means that in the future the whole management of events and the respective registration process (including all related announcement and reminder emails) will be taken care of from one central place. The event listings for each SIG as well as the historic meetings will be easily accessible going forward. There will still be some initial fine-tuning required to get all SIG chairs on board and trained up to do this, but it's looking very promising.

For 2025, the design of the website itself will be a topic that needs looking into. With the new concessionary membership level to expand the membership, we need to make sure that all the INSS offerings are easily accessible to everyone and that it's clear what INSS provides to members and beyond.

Governance

The International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS) was incorporated in 2011, and is governed by Articles of Association. INSS is both a company limited by guarantee without a share capital and a registered charity. INSS is controlled by its elected Directors, who are also its Trustees, via an Executive Committee comprised of the elected Directors and also co-opted members.

Objectives of the charity

The purposes of INSS are to advance education for the public benefit in the subject of spirituality by promoting:

- a) the critical study of all aspects of spirituality;
- b) education and dissemination regarding these matters; and
- c) the development of inclusive and respectful policies and professional practices.

Principal activities

The principal activities of INSS during the year were the publication of its journal, the further development of its website and other digital infrastructure, delivering the 2023 biennial conference, completing the re-negotiation of the Journal publishing contract, and hosting meetings of the special interest groups on “Spirituality and Education”, “Spirituality and the Arts”, “Spirituality and Consciousness”, and “Spirituality, Mental Health and Wellbeing”. INSS also hosted “The Conversational”, a discussion forum on spirituality matters.

Public benefit statement

The Trustees confirm that they have referred to the guidance contained in the Charity Commission's general guidance on public benefit in shaping its objectives for the year and planning its future activities. Specific details of how these objectives have been achieved and maintained during the year can be found in the accompanying reports of the Officers.

Financial review

The Statement of Financial Activities shows a net gain for the year of £12,506 and reserves at the year-end of £74,772.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Reserves policy

The reserves are the net assets of INSS. It is the policy of the Trustees to set aside the reserves to meet current and future expenditure regarding the operation of INSS and the pursuit of its objectives, and to cover any unforeseen deficits. The Trustees consider that the reserves need to be increased in the future to ensure the financial security of the Charity, to support its growth and to enhance its services.

Directors and Trustees

All of the elected members of Executive Committee are Directors of the Company and Trustees of the charity. All the members listed above served throughout the year. No remuneration is paid to members of the Executive Committee in their capacity as Trustees or Directors. Dr David Rousseau stood down as Chair at the end of the previous period, and the Executive Committee appointed Dr Joan Walton as the new Chair in February 2023.

Risk management

The Trustees review, as part of their regular Executive Committee meetings, all potential areas of risk which may affect the Society. Procedures are in place to identify and mitigate risks.

Trustees' responsibilities in relation to the financial statements

The Trustees (who are also the Directors of the Company for the purposes of company law) are responsible for preparing a Trustees' annual report and financial statements in accordance with applicable law and United Kingdom Accounting Standards (United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice).

Company law requires the charity Trustees to prepare financial statements for each year which give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the charitable company and of the incoming resources and application of resources, including the income and expenditure, of the Company for that year. In preparing the financial statements the trustees are required to:

- a) select suitable accounting policies and then apply them consistently;
- b) observe the methods and principles in the Charities SORP;
- c) make judgments and estimates that are reasonable and prudent;
- d) state whether applicable UK accounting standards have been followed, subject to any material departures disclosed and explained in the financial statements;
- e) prepare the financial statements on the going concern basis unless it is inappropriate to assume that the Society will continue in business.

The Trustees are responsible for keeping proper accounting records which disclose with reasonable accuracy at any time the financial position of the Network and to enable them to ensure that the financial statements comply with the Companies Act 2006. They are also responsible for safeguarding the assets of the Network and hence for taking reasonable steps for the prevention and detection of fraud and other irregularities.

The trustees are responsible for the maintenance and integrity of the corporate and financial information included on the charitable company's website. Legislation in the United Kingdom governing the preparation and dissemination of financial statements may differ from legislation in other jurisdictions.

Reporting Basis

The above report has been prepared in accordance with the special provisions in part 15 of the Companies Act 2006.

Independent examiner's report to the trustees of the International Network for the Study of Spirituality (" INSS ")

I report to the trustees on my examination of the accounts of INSS for the year ended 31st January 2024.

Responsibilities and basis of report

As the trustees of INSS you are responsible for the preparation of the accounts in accordance with the requirements of the Charities Act 2011 (" the Act "). I report in respect of my examination of the INSS accounts carried out under section 145 of the Act and in carrying out my examination I have followed all the applicable Directions given by the Charity Commission under section 145 (5)(b) of the Act.

Independent examiner's statement

I have completed my examination. I confirm that no material matters have come to my attention giving me cause to believe that in any material respect:

1. Accounting records were not kept as required by section 130 of the Act; or
2. The accounts do not accord with those records; or
3. The accounts do not comply with the applicable requirements concerning the form and content of accounts set out in the Charities (Accounts and Reports) Regulation 2008 other than any requirement that the accounts give a " true and fair view " which is not a matter considered as part of an independent examination.

I have no concerns and have come across no other matters in connection with the examination to which attention should be drawn in this report in order to enable a proper understanding of the accounts to be reached.

The Trustees and Officers present their report on the activities of INSS for the year ending 31 January 2023.

Report of the Chair

Dr David Rousseau

In the year under review we continued to develop the ability of INSS to serve and interconnect our international membership, and to promote the academic study of spirituality in all its facets.

It was in many respects a period of transition, with many ups and downs. However, overall we ended the year on a very positive note and with strong prospects for the future. I will briefly mention the main events here, but please refer to the individual Officer Reports for more detail.

Technical and operational support

Adam Boughey resigned from his role as Digital Infrastructure Manager in April 2022, and we were not able to secure a replacement until early 2023. I'd like to thank Julie Billingham, our Strategy Advisor on Operations & Technology, who stepped in and provided INSS with much needed technical and operational support during the 11 months we were seeking a replacement for Adam. In March 2023 we co-opted a new DI Manager, Armando Lüscher, and I'd like to use this opportunity to formally welcome Armando to our team.

Special Interest Groups

Building on the successful launch of our first SIG in October 2021, on the topic of "Spirituality and Consciousness", we launched two more in 2022. The first one, on "Spirituality and the Arts" launched in March 2022 with Annalisa Burello, June Boyce-Tillman and Lila Moore as Chairs. Its establishment was a response to contemporary trends in the arts and academia that seek to integrate the relationship between the arts and spirituality. The second one, on "Spirituality, Mental Health and Wellbeing", launched in September 2022 with Katja Milner and Jill Buckeldee as Chairs. This SIG was set up in response to interest raised in relation to these topics by INSS members, including those who work as practitioners and researchers in this field. Please see the Officer reports below for more details on these developments. I would like to thank the Execs and the SIG chairs for their hard work in making these initiatives come to fruition.

Conference

During 2022 the Execs invested a significant amount of time in the planning for the then upcoming next INSS conference to be held in Waterford, Ireland, during May 2023, on the theme of 'Spirituality, Critical Reflection, and Professional Practice in an Uncertain World'. This effort was ably led by Michael O'Sullivan as Conference Organiser and Joan Walton as Co-chair. The teamwork resulted in a conference that was fully subscribed and a great success socially, academically and financially. As the event actually occurred in the next reporting period, a full report will be given at the 2024 Annual Report. However some notes about the conference are contained in the reports of the Treasurer, Links Co-ordinator and Acting Digital Infrastructure Manager. Heartfelt thanks and congratulations to Michael, Joan and the team for making such a success of the first INSS conference to be held outside the UK.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Journal Editorship

Cheryl Hunt, our Journal's Chief Editor, indicated in her previous report her wish to pass her role to Profs Wilf McSherry and Linda Ross in early 2023. They worked together in 2022 to ensure a smooth transition, and with our publisher, Taylor & Francis, to enable us to use their online submission and review management system, which should make it practical for a team of two Co-Chief Editors to manage the editorial workflow. Wilf and Linda formally took on their roles of Co-Chief Editors on 17 May 2023 during the Waterford conference.

We owe a great debt of gratitude to Cheryl for shepherding the Journal so patiently and competently through to volume 13, and for her willingness to continue on as an Executive Editor. Congratulations are due also for her success in achieving a Journal Impact Factor for 2022 of 1.4, whereas the average for arts and humanities journals was 0.3 in 2022!

Publishing contract

In December 2019 we notified our publisher, Taylor & Francis, of our wish to re-negotiate the terms of our existing publishing contract, which had been in place since 2013 and was due to come to the end of its natural term in December 2020. Under the then existing contract INSS and T&F own the journal jointly, INSS provides the journal content, and T&F manages journal production and distribution, administers our membership subscriptions and renewals, and TF pays INSS a fixed annual amount for JSS expenses. This amount has been static for the last 7 years. Our reason for wishing to renegotiate the terms was partly because we wanted to take over the management of our member subscriptions and renewals, and partly because we wished to improve the financial terms of our relationship. This turned into a protracted negotiating process, led by myself but with very substantial support and guidance from Cheryl Hunt and an advisor, Prof. Roderick Hunt.

This re-negotiation process proceeded throughout 2022; I'm happy to report that it was finally concluded in October 2023, and that we are very pleased with the outcome. Under the new arrangements INSS now has full ownership of the journal title, and will receive royalties at 12.5% on T&F's non-subscription income. This will increase to higher levels as T&F's income from our Journal passes certain limits. At present income levels, the royalty we receive will already be triple the amount we previously received annually for JSS expenses.

Officer roles

2022 and 2023 has been challenging for the Execs in terms of the effort demanded, and in the light of this we have commenced a process to review and document the responsibilities of the different Officer roles, with a view to distribute better the workload, strengthen our procedures and resilience, and to help us plan an expansion of the Execs team. This is still ongoing, but we hope to bring these expansion plans into action in early 2024.

Funds

In April 2022 INSS received an unsolicited grant of £35,000 from the GS Gives Annual Giving Fund, an account within Goldman Sachs Gives (UK). This was provided to support our general charitable activities, provides a very welcome boost to our financial situation, and will open up valuable opportunities for advancing our mission. This is to be supplemented by income of £8,375 from the 2023 conference, most of which was received in 2022 and so is included in the bank balance shown in the Balance sheet, but will only be properly reconciled in the accounts for the next period. On the basis of this positive financial position, we hope to be able to announce soon plans for expanding our services and outreach activities, especially in the area of educational resources about the study of spirituality.

Change of Chair

Lastly, I would like to mention that due to changes in my personal circumstances I stood down as Chair at the end of January 2023, after three years in this role.

I would like to thank everyone on the Execs for what we achieved together in this time. It has been an interesting time that has seen many changes, including changing our name and Articles; rebuilding our website including a members-only area incorporating online access to the archive of our Journal; taking charge of our membership management via a new online membership database and membership management system; incorporating event management and payment processing facilities into our website; staging our first on-line conference and enabling our first international one; launching three SIGS; and securing a new publishing contract on very favourable terms. I am pleased that we have come so far in only three years, and I look forward to what can now be built on this foundation. The Execs elected Dr Joan Walton as our new Chair, and I wish her, and the team under her guidance, every success for the future.

It has been my great honour to serve as Chair, and I hope to continue to be useful to INSS in the future, albeit in less demanding roles. Despite my challenging personal circumstances I remain willing to continue in my role as Company Secretary.

Report of the Honorary Treasurer

Mrs Helen McSherry

This has been a good year for our finances. A couple of large donations totalling £35,000 have increased our bank balance and sustains INSS's good financial position. Membership fees of £8,319 of which £3,060 was paid to Taylor and Francis for the publishing of the Journal gave us an income of 5,259, an increase on last year. Proceeds from the Special Interest Group meeting registration fees have also added to our income.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

We had two other main costs this year. Our PayPal facility incurred £812 and expenses relating to the administration of the Journal for the Study of Spirituality by INSS Executive Editors was £930. Our general administrative expenses were around the same at £751 giving us a net income in total of £37,560 for the year.

Our bank balance at the end of the financial year (31 January 2023) was £82,948 however this does include expenses of £443 along with £21,126 of registration fees relevant to the 2023 Conference held in May 2023.

Report of the Membership Secretary

Prof. Linda Ross

At the end of the year (31st January 2023) there were 224 members, made up of 179 standard members and 45 honorary members (those on INSS Executive and/or the Editorial Board for the 'Journal for the Study of Spirituality'). This compares with a total of 173 members on 31st January 2022, an increase of 44. We are delighted to see the year-on-year increase in membership from across the globe: UK, Europe, North America, Australasia, Asia Pacific, South Africa, Eastern Europe and Latin America.

Report of the Strategy Advisor on Operations & Technology

Mrs Julie Billingham

In this period, we continued to improve our digital tools to enable the Exec team more easily to manage their portfolios. My role in this is to advise on the tools that are available and to set them up in such a way that the operating teams can use them effectively with minimal support from the Digital Infrastructure Manager.

A major focus has been to enable the smooth running of our Special Interest Groups (SIGs). Over the current reporting year, I configured our membership platform to simplify the running of the Spirituality and the Arts SIG (SASIG), while bearing in mind the other SIGs in plan for later on. We revised the website navigation to allow for a new menu item for the SIGs, and created a default structure for SIG pages that includes widgets that automatically display any upcoming SIG events. The SASIG particularly wanted non-members to be able to attend events, so I set up the capability to take payment via the website when registering for a SIG event. Once an event is entered into the system, email invitations, confirmations and reminders are automatically sent to INSS members. At the request of the Chairs, I added the capability for members to be able to write something about their background and their interest in a particular SIG, so that these could be automatically shared (with permission) in a private members-only SIG space.

On another front, this year saw planning start for the 2023 conference in Waterford. To this end I developed a budgeting and forecasting spreadsheet that enabled us to set appropriate pricing and attendance targets for the conference. This spreadsheet tool should be easily reusable for future conferences.

Report of the Acting Digital Infrastructure Manager

Mrs Julie Billingham

Early in this reporting period, our then Digital Infrastructure Manager, Adam Boughey, stepped down from the Committee. Since a number of infrastructure projects were ready to be handed over to the operational team, I took on his role on an interim basis while we searched for a replacement.

A key aspect of this role was to train one of the SASIG Chairs, Annalisa Burello, in how to use the new capabilities to manage the SIG on an ongoing basis. Encouragingly, she picked up the processes easily, even though the technology was new to her, and became quite independent over the course of the year.

The next major test of the new system came with setting up the Waterford conference as an event within the digital platform. This enabled attendees to register online, selecting various types of registrations and optional extras, and paying online via the website. As before, each new use highlighted constraints in the technology that had to be worked around, but in general the system proved robust. The reporting features of the platform were particularly helpful for tracking registrations and planning.

Throughout the year I supported the Membership Secretary, Treasurer, Conference organisers and others in dealing with any member issues that required a technical resolution. One such was the interface that allows members to get free online access to the JSS, provided they click through to the JSS from the members area. Updates from Google and Microsoft had broken this link, so we needed to collaborate with Taylor & Francis to explore alternatives and keep the link working.

Finally, just after the end of this reporting period, we were joined by a new Digital Infrastructure Manager, Armando Lüscher. I'm delighted to welcome Armando to the role and wish him every success in the future.

Report of the Spirituality Scholars' Network and SIGs Co-ordinator

Prof. Melanie Rogers

The Spirituality Scholars' Network (SSN) is led by Melanie Rogers, Sophie MacKenzie, Cheryl Hunt and Alex Pimor. The SSN team meet every 2 months to discuss Special Interest Groups, The Conversational and other ideas as to how to engage INSS membership. The SSN aims to support postgraduates, early career researchers and scholars in sharing their interests, experiences, and projects in the field of spirituality studies. Sophie continues to post regularly on social media and we are starting to build up our following there.

In the year under review, the SSN has met in person at the INSS conference in Waterford and several SSN members are now working together on collaborative research projects. Three Special Interest Groups (SIG) are active with INSS. (One closed SIG focused on “Spirituality and Consciousness”, an open group focusing on “Spirituality and the Arts” and an open group focusing on “Spirituality, Mental Health and Wellbeing”. The Conversational initiative continues to develop.

The Conversational:

In 2023, The Conversational series offered 2 sessions: Inner Conscious Leadership (facilitated by Alex Pimor) in March 2023 and The origins and psychology of biblical mysticism in June 2023 (presented by Les Lancaster). A third session is scheduled for November 2023, with Noel Keating, on Children's spirituality and the benefit of meditation on a whole-school basis.

Each session was attended by a growing number of interested parties, who engaged in dynamic conversations.

The experiential format of the Conversational evolves with each session, as speakers lead in the way that suits them and their subject-matter. Nevertheless, the session usually lasts an hour (with the possibility to extend for a further 30 mins depending on interest and time permitted). About 20-30% of the initial session is for introductions and presentation, the remainder of the time is for conversations or workshop style interactions.

The Conversational has received great feedback and it is anticipated that the series will continue in 2024.

Report from the Chair of the Spirituality and Consciousness SIG: Joan Walton

The Spirituality and Consciousness SIG had its first meeting in October 2021 and has since then been meeting monthly. It is a closed group, with currently 7 members. The aim is to create a safe space where members can exchange ideas about consciousness and spirituality, the nature of the relationship between each, and to share experiences which inform those ideas. As time has progressed, the dialogue has gone deeper and more profound. We are now sharing what we have each gained from our participation in the group. Using the considerable amount of data we have gathered during our time together through our written experiences, reflections and theorising, we are planning to produce an account of the learning that has evolved from the group process during the last two years.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Report of from the Chairs of the Spirituality and the Arts SIG: Annalisa Burello, Lila Moore and June Boyce Tillman

During 2023, we have developed two meeting formats: 1. A meeting led by a speaker and a particular topic. 2. Provocation: A meeting for general open discussions in which participants share their reflections on various aspects of the arts as spirituality. We have found that these meetings attract lively and in-depth interdisciplinary conversations. These two formats contribute to academic research and artistic and creative practice, allowing relevant themes to emerge spontaneously.

In 2023, we held four meetings led by speakers:

- A special talk with Prof. Louis Lagana: Was Malta a Place for the Veneration of a Mother Goddess? ;
- Water as a Spiritual Signifier by Water Artist Alison Churchill;
- Dr Karel James Bouse presented Expressive Arts as Therapy; and
- Annalisa Burello MSc presented Marina Abramović, the Artist-Shaman.

We already have a few speakers lined up for 2024.

The SASIG events provide a platform for artists, wellbeing practitioners and scholars to showcase their work and research projects, and to engage in a discourse that encourages the exploration of the arts in a broad spiritual context. At the heart of SASIG there is a quest that seeks to explore a variety of relationships between the arts and spirituality.

Report from the Chairs of the Spirituality, Mental health and Wellbeing (SMW) SIG: Katja Milner and Jill Buckeldee

The Spirituality, Mental health and Wellbeing SIG was set up in response to interest raised in relation to these topics by INSS members, including those who work as practitioners and researchers in this field. The first meeting took place on the 26th September 2022 and welcomed participants in a scoping exercise to gauge interest and explore ideas about future directions. Group members said that reflection and discussion was a helpful way to begin and further develop the SIG's directions. Further sessions were oriented around such group discussion, and in addition provided a focus around specific themes such as 'Hope' and 'Nurturing'. After further discussion, two key descriptions of the SIG were agreed upon:

The SMW SIG is focussed predominantly around exploring spirituality, mental health and wellbeing in the context of research, scholarship, healthcare and therapeutic practice.

It provides a co-created safe space which welcomes diversity, to reflect together and discuss pertinent themes and issues connected within this topic, as well as skill-share and inspire ideas and learning.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

An example of sharing expertise within the group was a presentation provided by a SIG member on 'Culture, diversity and spirituality' which focussed on navigating tensions between the spiritual model and medical model within social work practice. It was followed by a group discussion. The SIG aims to provide further opportunities for members to present on topics of interest and expertise in the future, as well as continue to highlight a collaborative approach and a safe space to reflect, share and learn together.

Report of the Social Media Co-ordinator

Dr Sophie MacKenzie

Twitter:

The @INSSpirituality twitter account has grown steadily over the last year and now stands at 281 (up from 251 followers last report).

@JSSpirituality has 123 followers (up from 115 last report).

Facebook:

The INSS Spirituality Scholars' Network Facebook page now has 99 members (up from 82 last report).

Both Twitter and Facebook are used to promote INSS activities (such as the conference), as well as to disseminate other relevant information/ papers to our membership.

Report of the Links Co-ordinator

Dr Michael O'Sullivan

Outreach to other academic organisations in the field of spirituality studies continued in 2022, seeking to establish links for mutual co-operations and promotion. So far INSS has established such relations with 22 organizations. The links page on the new INSS website can be viewed here: <https://spiritualitystudiesnetwork.org/Links/> and also a page on guidelines for how we establish such links, here: <https://spiritualitystudiesnetwork.org/Guidelines-for-link-inclusion/>

The Links Coordinator accepted to be Chairperson and lead organiser of the 7th biennial INSS conference to be held in May 2023 on 'Spirituality, Critical Reflection, and Professional Practice in an Uncertain World'. As Emeritus at the new South East Technological University, Waterford Campus, Ireland, and the founding programme leader of the MA in Applied Spirituality at that university (formerly Waterford Institute of Technology and Institute of Technology Carlow), he was able to have the conference hosted at that university. This also meant that INSS was able to hold its biennial conference outside the UK for the first time, thus attracting interest about the organisation among new cohorts of people and giving it a more truly international face.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

As the Executive Director of The Spirituality Institute for Research and Education (SpIRE – www.spiritualityinstitute.ie) in Dublin, Ireland the Links Coordinator was able to involve SpIRE in promoting the conference, in attracting presenters and other participants, and in providing volunteers for various tasks. As an administrator of SpIRE's website and social media platforms he was able to bring the conference, and thus also INSS, to the attention of what figures for the posts show were thousands of viewers. He also used SpIRE's social media platforms to draw attention to Dr Cheryl Hunt's book on the conference theme.

The Links Coordinator also avails of his teaching of postgraduate students, and other leadership roles in the field of spirituality studies, to spread the word about INSS.

Report of the JSS Book Reviews Editor

Assoc. Prof. Robyn Wrigley-Carr

Since the last AGM I have concluded eight book reviews for JSS – four in Issue 13.1 and four in Issue 13.2. The reviews cover spirituality in relation to: social work practice, disability, dementia and mental health, speech and language therapy, and counselling. Reviews also explore these broad topics: Indigenous theology and the Western worldview, the WHO and the 'spiritual dimension' of health, Mysticism, and science of life after death

Report of the Chief Editor of the Journal

Journal for the Study of Spirituality

Dr Cheryl Hunt, University of Exeter, UK

Background

My Annual Report on the Journal for the Study of Spirituality (JSS) for the INSS AGM in 2022 was my final report as Chief Editor. It summarised a number of facts, figures and activities associated with the journal up to the date of the report: 23 October 2022. From September 2022, I began working with Profs Linda Ross and Wilf McSherry to effect a handover of the Editorship to them. They formally assumed the role of Co-Editors-in Chief on 17 May 2023 at a Reception to mark the occasion at the INSS International Conference in Waterford, Ireland. This Report covers the period 1 February 2022 to 31 January 2023, with some details extending beyond those dates where the information is relevant to events within the reporting period.

The following paragraph is an updated version of the statement with which I have introduced previous reports:

The Journal for the Study of Spirituality (JSS) is published by Taylor and Francis (T&F) in association with the International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS). The journal and its title are co-owned by T&F and INSS. The journal is now in its 13th year of publication, with two issues per year of approximately 96 pages each, published in

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

April/May and October/November. Each issue normally contains between 6-8 articles as well as book reviews, occasional announcements, and an Editorial. The latter is always free access as it is designed to provide a 'window' on the contents and to highlight key themes. Authors have the option to make their published article open access by paying a fee, otherwise only the abstracts of articles are available to those without a subscription to the journal - unless selected articles are made free access for a limited period as part of a T&F marketing promotion.¹ All members of INSS receive a print version of the two issues each year as part of their membership fee, as well as access to the full online archive (from 2011-date). Over 3,000 institutions worldwide offer access to JSS. There are now approximately 22k downloads of articles each year – an increase of more than 200% since 2019.

A key change in addition to those highlighted above is that, as part of a new contractual agreement with T&F, INSS is now the sole owner of the journal and its title. Dr David Rousseau will feature this in his Annual Chair's Report but I mention it here because I have been involved in the recent contractual negotiations. As its Editor and academic lead, I have generally felt it important to remain independent of contractual and financial matters affecting the journal in order to avoid any possible conflict of interest. I agreed to become involved in the latest negotiations because I had already given notice of resigning from the Editorship, and because I was able to bring the full history of the journal to bear on the discussion.

Transfer of the Chief Editorship and associated developments

Preliminaries

Having written the original proposal for the journal in 2008 and edited it since its inception in 2010, I had intended to resign from the Editorship at the end of its tenth year of publication. However, because this coincided with issues associated with both the Covid pandemic and the transition from BASS to INSS, change at that time seemed inappropriate. However, following the 2021 AGM, I notified the INSS Executive that I wished to hand over the Editorship within the next 18 months and, in order to facilitate this, began discussions with T&F in February 2022 about establishing an electronic submission and reviewing system for the journal (ScholarOne). Hitherto, all submissions had been sent directly to my personal email address and I had then corresponded with authors and reviewers by email. Linda Ross and Wilf McSherry, who had been Executive Editors of JSS since its inception, agreed to assist in the development of the new system. The journal's Managing Editor was on maternity leave at this time and, unfortunately, plans for the new system stalled when her temporary replacement moved to another job in April. Discussions did, nevertheless, continue about recruiting and appointing a new Editor. I was delighted when, in July, Linda and Wilf offered to take on the role as joint Co-Editors-in-Chief. Their appointment was approved unanimously by the INSS Executive Committee on 13 July 2022.

Transition period

In September 2022, Wilf, Linda and I met in London for an 'Away Day' to discuss numerous practical details about the functioning of the journal as well as various ideas for its future

¹ Between January and August 2023, T&F made several articles free access. These were selected from the full JSS archive to highlight the wide range of articles included in it, particularly those with relevance to the conference theme: Spirituality, Critical Reflection and Professional Practice in an Uncertain World. The publishers also kindly provided a complementary print copy of the 10th Anniversary issue of JSS (10.1) for every conference delegate.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

development. Sophie MacKenzie, our Social Media Co-ordinator, joined us in the afternoon to consider how this increasingly important aspect of JSS might be further developed. Linda, Wilf and I had several subsequent online meetings, including with our Managing Editor who had returned in August. We also attended an online training session in the use of ScholarOne. Linda and Wilf adapted the templates of the standard letters I had previously used in communicating with authors/reviewers so that they could be generated automatically. A trial workflow system was set up - although none of the three standard models offered was ideally suited to JSS.

Until 31 December 2022, I continued to process all submissions that came in via my email address. For various technical reasons the submission site did not go live until 18 February 2023. At least 15 articles were submitted during this six-week period. I declined three outright as they did not meet the journal's requirements, and invited the other contributors to resubmit when the new submission site was operational. I kept a written record of authors, titles, original submission dates etc. which I passed on to Linda and Wilf with recommendations about suitable reviewers. The majority of authors did subsequently resubmit through the electronic portal.

I edited and compiled the contents of issue 13.1 and Wilf and Linda wrote the Editorial. The issue was published on schedule and was available well ahead of the INSS conference where we formally marked the change of Editorship.

Submissions and production targets

In the early part of 2022, I was concerned about the low number and quality of submissions being received but was reassured by our then Managing Editor that this was 'a noticeable trend across many journals post-pandemic'. Although the production of issue 12.1 was delayed slightly, sufficient good quality material was eventually secured to ensure that both issues in Volume 12 met their page-length targets.

The number of submissions increased quite dramatically from mid-2022 but, as I have noted in previous reports, there is a very long 'tail' in terms of quality. Our acceptance rate has dropped year-on-year and in the reporting period was around 25%.

All accepted articles are published online prior to their inclusion in the next issue. During the reporting period, the average length of time from acceptance to online publication was 25 days (this compares with 34 days in 2020).

In January 2023, T&F production targets for each volume changed from page length to article numbers. This is a welcome change, applying to issue 13.1 onwards. It was always difficult to calculate page length prior to production, especially if articles contained Figures, Tables etc., and this often resulted in being slightly over the page budget – for which permission had to be sought; or under budget – in which case additional information about INSS activities was usually included. Under the new system, JSS is expected to include 18 items per volume (the figure is based on what has been published to date). This number includes Forum articles and book reviews as well as 'main' articles, but not Editorials or announcements. It will be possible to exceed this number if the Editors wish.

Editorial Board

Editorial Board members have always been the primary Reviewers for articles submitted to JSS. The rationale for this is to work with a body of colleagues who have a 'feel' for the journal and its ethos and who are familiar with its contents. Guest Reviewers are invited to review articles when a Board member with the necessary subject or methodological expertise is unavailable, when an article requires specialist knowledge which is not represented on the Board, or when Board members are all fully committed. Membership of the Editorial Board is normally for three years, with the option to renew. However, in light of the forthcoming changes to the submission and reviewing system, all members were asked in late 2022 whether or not they wished to continue to serve on the Board; a small number took the opportunity to retire from it at that point. The valuable service of all former Board members is acknowledged in the journal's Editorial following their retirement, and permanently on the INSS website.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

An open invitation to apply for membership of the Board was placed on the JSS and INSS websites and this was extended directly to a number of former Guest Reviewers and authors. In consequence, the following colleagues were welcomed onto the Board in January 2023: Laura Béres, Bernadette Flanagan, Janet Groen, Volker Kessler, Les Lancaster, and Matteo Di Placido.

A 'job description' for Editorial Board members is included as an appendix to this report. Anyone with relevant experience and an interest in joining the Board should contact Linda Ross or Wilf McSherry, who would also be pleased to hear from colleagues willing to act as occasional Guest Reviewers.

From 1 January 2023, the Board is officially designated as the 'International Editorial Board' and the 'Named Editors' are as follows:

Co-Editors-in-Chief

Wilf McSherry, Staffordshire University, UK

Linda Ross, University of South Wales, UK

Executive Editors

David R. Hodge, Arizona State University, USA (formerly North America Editor)

Cheryl Hunt, University of Exeter, UK (Founding Editor and former Chief Editor)

John Swinton, University of Aberdeen, UK

Book Reviews Editor

Robyn Wrigley-Carr, University of Divinity, Australia

Social Media Editor

Sophie MacKenzie, AECC University College, Bournemouth, UK

And Finally

I cannot end this, my last, Annual Report on JSS without saying once more what a great privilege it has been to see the journal come into being and to flourish (despite a few difficulties along the way!). I am hugely indebted to the many BASS/INSS colleagues who have provided invaluable support and encouragement since the journal was first mooted over fifteen years ago. I am grateful, too, to colleagues at Equinox, Maney and T&F for their publishing expertise and advice; most recently, especially, to Jess Holmes, Managing Editor, and Patrick Fallon, Head of Portfolio at T&F. And I extend my heartfelt thanks to all the Editorial Board members, Guest Reviewers and authors with whom I have worked: the journal would not exist without them. Nor would it have achieved the accolade that has recently been announced: its first Impact Factor of 1.4!

At the Reception marking the formal handover of the journal's Editorship, I was surprised and delighted to be presented with a gift from the INSS Executive Committee: a beautiful engraved clock made of Waterford crystal to acknowledge my time as Chief Editor. In now wishing Linda and Wilf every success and satisfaction during their time as Editors, it seems appropriate to conclude with the words of a toast to JSS that I gave in Waterford, an ancient port city: a wish for calm seas and a following wind for the journal and all who sail with her on her journey into the future ...

(Exeter, 19 October 2023)

APPENDIX to Annual Report of the Chief Editor of JSS, October 2023

‘Job description’ for members of the International Editorial Board of the Journal for the Study of Spirituality (JSS)

International Editorial Board appointments are normally for three years in the first instance, with the option to renew after that.

The requirements of the role are essentially as follows:

1. To champion JSS

- Be an ambassador for the journal; build, nurture, and help the Chief Editor(s) to grow a community around it.
- Increase awareness of the articles published in JSS in all relevant communities and amongst colleagues.
- Make JSS essential reading, for example by including key articles on your students’ reading lists.
- Participate whenever possible in INSS conferences and events.
- Assist in developing the social media presence of JSS. Sophie Mackenzie is currently our Social Media Editor and would be pleased to discuss this further.
- Flag up newsworthy articles which may have relevance for marketing the journal.

2. To assist in developing the contents of the journal

- Occasionally submit your own work for consideration.
- Encourage the submission of articles to JSS from expert researchers in the field, including colleagues.
- Encourage ‘rising stars’ to submit their work to JSS – new young talent is vital for a journal’s health and capacity-building.
- Suggest potential contributors, books for review, and book reviewers; and generate new ideas for development.

3. To assist in the peer review process

- Provide support for the peer review process and act as a reviewer when required. Editorial Board members are normally expected to review up to four articles each year (it is often fewer than that!).
- Adhere to the journal’s guidelines on Publishing Ethics to ensure that the integrity and reputation of JSS is maintained at all times. (Further information on ethics can be found in the COPE Code of Conduct and Best Practice Guidelines for Journal Editors.)

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

4. Promote online usage of JSS

- Check that your institutional library subscribes to the Journal – and if it does not, please let us know!
- Sign up for Table of Contents alerts on the JSS website and encourage colleagues and students to do so.

5. Provide feedback and strategic suggestions

- Attend meetings as required. A face-to-face Editorial Board meeting is normally held at the INSS biennial conference for all Board members attending the conference. Occasional meetings may also be arranged online but currently the main mode of contact between the Chief Editor(s) and Board members is generally via email.
- Provide the Chief Editor(s) and Taylor & Francis with any useful feedback from colleagues and friends and any suggestions you may have for the future development of the journal.

Relationship with the International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

For the duration of their appointment, International Editorial Board members of JSS are classified as Honorary members of the INSS. This ensures access to the whole JSS archive online, including the current issue.

Full members of INSS receive the two issues of JSS each year in print form as well as access to the online archive. The annual membership fee for INSS is currently £65. All Editorial Board members are warmly invited to join the Network as a full member.

INSS was formerly known as the British Association for the Study of Spirituality (BASS). Its name was formally changed in 2020 and a new website was launched. See: <https://spiritualstudiesnetwork.org/>

This continues to be a work-in-progress but, besides providing details about membership, the site contains information about the purpose and vision of INSS, the history of both JSS and BASS/INSS, and information about the biennial conferences, special interest groups (SIGs) and related matters, including support for doctoral students and other researchers and scholars involved in developing the field of spirituality studies.

International Editorial Board members are encouraged to make use of, and make contributions to/suggestions about, both the website and INSS itself. Members associated with a centre, organisation or institution with a focus on the study of spirituality are invited to contact Michael O'Sullivan, the INSS Links Co-ordinator, to discuss the possibility of creating an online link.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Report of the Directors and Trustees for the year ended 31 January 2023

The Directors and Trustees present their report and accounts for the year ended 31 January 2023.

Governance

The International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS) was incorporated in 2011, and is governed by Articles of Association. INSS is both a company limited by guarantee without a share capital and a registered charity. INSS is controlled by its elected Directors, who are also its Trustees, via an Executive Committee comprised of the elected Directors and also co-opted members.

Objectives of the charity

The purposes of INSS are to advance education for the public benefit in the subject of spirituality by promoting:

- a) the critical study of all aspects of spirituality;
- b) education and dissemination regarding these matters; and
- c) the development of inclusive and respectful policies and professional practices.

Principal activities

The principal activities of INSS during the year were the publication of its journal, the further development of its website and other digital infrastructure, planning for the 2023 biennial conference, continuing the re-negotiation of the Journal publishing contract, and hosting meetings of the special interest groups on “Spirituality and Consciousness” and “Spirituality and the Arts”.

Public benefit statement

The Trustees confirm that they have referred to the guidance contained in the Charity Commission's general guidance on public benefit in shaping its objectives for the year and planning its future activities. Specific details of how these objectives have been achieved and maintained during the year can be found in the accompanying reports of the Officers.

Financial review

The Statement of Financial Activities shows a net gain for the year of £37,560 and reserves at the year-end of £62,265.

International Network for the Study of Spirituality (INSS)

Reserves policy

The reserves are the net assets of INSS. It is the policy of the Trustees to set aside the reserves to meet current and future expenditure regarding the operation of INSS and the pursuit of its objectives, and to cover any unforeseen deficits. The Trustees consider that the reserves need to be increased in the future to ensure the financial security of the Charity, to support its growth and to enhance its services.

Directors and Trustees

All of the elected members of Executive Committee are Directors of the Company and Trustees of the charity. All the members listed above served throughout the year, except Dr Adam Boughey, who resigned in April 2022. No remuneration is paid to members of the Executive Committee in their capacity as Trustees or Directors. Dr David Rousseau stood down as Chair just after the end of the period, and the Executive Committee appointed Dr Joan Walton as the new Chair in February 2023.

Risk management

The Trustees review, as part of their regular Executive Committee meetings, all potential areas of risk which may affect the Society. Procedures are in place to identify and mitigate risks.

Trustees' responsibilities in relation to the financial statements

The Trustees (who are also the Directors of the Company for the purposes of company law) are responsible for preparing a Trustees' annual report and financial statements in accordance with applicable law and United Kingdom Accounting Standards (United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice).

Company law requires the charity Trustees to prepare financial statements for each year which give a true and fair view of the state of affairs of the charitable company and of the incoming resources and application of resources, including the income and expenditure, of the Company for that year. In preparing the financial statements the trustees are required to:

- a) select suitable accounting policies and then apply them consistently;
- b) observe the methods and principles in the Charities SORP;
- c) make judgments and estimates that are reasonable and prudent;
- d) state whether applicable UK accounting standards have been followed, subject to any material departures disclosed and explained in the financial statements;
- e) prepare the financial statements on the going concern basis unless it is inappropriate to assume that the Society will continue in business.

The Trustees are responsible for keeping proper accounting records which disclose with reasonable accuracy at any time the financial position of the Network and to enable them to ensure that the financial statements comply with the Companies Act 2006. They are also responsible for safeguarding the assets of the Network and hence for taking reasonable steps for the prevention and detection of fraud and other irregularities.

The trustees are responsible for the maintenance and integrity of the corporate and financial information included on the charitable company's website. Legislation in the United Kingdom governing the preparation and dissemination of financial statements may differ from legislation in other jurisdictions.

Reporting Basis

The above report has been prepared in accordance with the special provisions in part 15 of the Companies Act 2006.

Approval

Independent examiner's report to the trustees of the International Network for the Study of Spirituality (" INSS ")

I report to the trustees on my examination of the accounts of INSS for the year ended 31st January 2023.

Responsibilities and basis of report

As the trustees of INSS you are responsible for the preparation of the accounts in accordance with the requirements of the Charities Act 2011 (" the Act "). I report in respect of my examination of the INSS accounts carried out under section 145 of the Act and in carrying out my examination I have followed all the applicable Directions given by the Charity Commission under section 145 (5)(b) of the Act.

Independent examiner's statement

I have completed my examination. I confirm that no material matters have come to my attention giving me cause to believe that in any material respect:

1. Accounting records were not kept as required by section 130 of the Act; or
2. The accounts do not accord with those records; or
3. The accounts do not comply with the applicable requirements concerning the form and content of accounts set out in the Charities (Accounts and Reports) Regulation 2008 other than any requirement that the accounts give a " true and fair view " which is not a matter considered as part of an independent examination.

I have no concerns and have come across no other matters in connection with the examination to which attention should be drawn in this report in order to enable a proper understanding of the accounts to be reached.
