Overview and contact information

This document is the trustees' annual report for Rights Realization Centre (RRC), charity registration number: 1178519, which the Charity Commission registered on 24 May 2018. The Chairperson, Drewery Dyke, remains the contact point for RRC, at: 17, Leswin Road, London, N16 7NL.

The governing document for the RRC, which is a CIO, is its "constitution", accessible at:

https://docs.google.com/document/d/1vOe8QkiMNzZRuCi3Ocl_wdGiGo-blicMhyNoUUF4AsI/edit?usp=sharing

This report covers 1 January - 31 December 2024.

Trustees

There was one change of trustee composition in 2024: at the 14 October 2024 AGM, Dr Abdelmitaal Gershah resigned and Paul McLaughlin was appointed.

Charity overview

In 2024, the RRC promoted human rights by contributing to research into specific human rights issues, alongside partners. It sought to promote public support for human rights and promoted a generalised respect to such standards, including by way of international advocacy. In 2024, RRC did not provide technical advice to any government.

Employees and volunteers

The trustees continued to engage with partners on a voluntary basis, seeking to fulfil the organisation's mission of awareness-raising by contributing to publications about the human rights situation in specific Middle Eastern countries; there were no employees or volunteers.

Basic finances

The RRC had no income or expenditure in 2024; it neither sought funding nor did it undertake any spending. It changed its banking provider, on which, see the AGM notes below.

Governance

The RRC continued to be a solely voluntary initiative, in which members volunteered their time, at no cost; the chairperson of the trustees engaged with other trustees in a collegial manner. The new trustee was recruited on the basis of finding a person willing to fulfill the role.

Risk and safeguarding

There were no serious incidents that should have been reported.

Code of Ethics and Conduct

Date: 24 October 2024

Revision and/or renewal date: 30 October 2026

Person responsible for policy: Chairperson

1-Overview and Background

1.1 - Organisational purpose and context of this policy - Established on 24 May 2018, Rights Realization Centre (RRC) is a Charitable Incorporated Organisation (CIO) registered with the Charity Commission for England and Wales as Charity number 1178519. According to its governing documents, its charitable object is:

To promote human rights (as set out in the Universal Declaration of human Rights and subsequent United Nations conventions and declarations) throughout the world, in particular but not exclusively the Middle East and Horn of Africa regions by any of the following means:

- Research into human rights issues
- Providing technical advice to government and others on human rights matters;
- Promoting public support for human rights;
- Promoting respect for human rights amongst individual and corporations
- International advocacy of human rights

1.2 - Organisational aspiration - As of October 2024, RRC continues to rely on the volunteer activities of its members to advance its mandate. As the organisation becomes increasingly established, it seeks to develop policies in line with its mandate and aspirations, such as this Code of Ethics and Conduct. RRC supports and seeks to uphold the standards set out in, for example, the April 2019 Code of Conduct of the Conference of International Non-governmental organisations of the Council of Europe. RRC is likewise a supporter of the The World Association of Non-Governmental Organisations' (WANGO) own Code of Ethics and Conduct. In the coming years, RRC aspires to develop policies on, amongst other things, data handling, finance, security, sexual harassment, child safeguarding, privacy, non-discrimination and in relation to the environment.

1.3 - Overall behavioural framework - All employees and anyone engaged to conduct work on behalf of SALAM DHR, including volunteers, advisors, and interns, must conduct themselves in the spirit of the international human rights standards that shape the work of the organisation. They will seek to convey values relating to diversity and inclusion; commitment and responsibility; social and environmental awareness and responsibility, and to treat all people, whether within or outside the organisation, with respect and dignity and endeavour to communicate with everyone in a way that is compatible with such standards so as to advance the organisation's overarching objectives. They must behave with integrity at all times and wherever they may be.

2 - Code of Ethics and Conduct

2.1 - Diversity and inclusion, including gender - In keeping with the spirit and letter of international human rights standards, every person engaged with RRC must endeavour to conduct themselves in as inclusive manner as reasonably possible, and seek to promote diversity to the extent it is possible. The organisation and all those engaged with it will seek to promote and implement an intersectional approach to diversity and gender equity. The organisation will arrange, on an ad hoc basis, training in this regard.

2.2 - General behavioural conduct - All employees and anyone engaged to conduct work on behalf of RRC, including volunteers, advisors, and interns, must not engage in any illegal activity. To do so violates the organisation's code of conduct. Anyone engaged with RRC must not harass or bully any other person, whether within or outside the organisation. For the purposes of this policy, this is defined as conduct that could be expected from any reasonable person.

2.3 - Administration of activities generally considered as part of human resources - RRC's Chairperson will oversee the administration of matters that could reasonably be understood as being 'human resources' and is responsible for the implementation of this policy. All grievances or any other matters of concerns relating to matters that could reasonably form part of a human resources concern will be dealt with by the Chairperson, with a right of appeal to another trustee, who will form an independent panel for the purposes of hearing an appeal. In respect to a grievance against the Chairperson, the first assessment will be conducted by the designated team of another trustee while another, independent panel will be formed for the purpose of any appeal. Anyone involved in a grievance procedure will have the right to accompaniment and/or representation of their choice.

2.4 - Internal practices - Every non-volunteering person engaged with RRC will be provided with a contract and/or terms of reference for their engagement with the organisation. It will summarise pay, a job description or framework of expectations for the engagement; leave periods, if applicable; line management; benefits, if relevant and, if needed, any onboarding procedures.

2.5 - Conduct as it applies to external parties - The spirit and general expectations set out above shape expected conduct with those who are outside the RRC structure. Above all, those engaged with RRC, including its partners, must treat all those they encounter outside the organisation with courtesy, respect and dignity. In the conduct of research and advocacy, confidentiality must be guaranteed; if RRC wishes to draw upon and publicise the experience of any person, the relevant person must obtain informed consent. All those engaged with RRC will adhere to intellectual property rights and avoid conflict of interest.

2.6 - Capacity building - The organisation will endeavour, on an ad hoc basis, to share examples of best practice in the area of conduct, say by way of disseminating audio-visual material, and encourage those engaged with RRC to seek their own knowledge in respect to the application of such standards, along with respect and awareness towards the environment and the principles of sustainability that inspire and inform the conduct that RRC expects of its members and supporters towards all people and at all times.

3 - Health and Safety

3.1 - Framework - All employees and anyone engaged to conduct work on behalf of RRC must adhere to reasonable measures in respect to health and safety.

3.2 - Online safety and data handling - In respect to computer and online safety, all those engaged with RRC must use the highest possible online or cyber security standards including strong passwords and, where possible, two-step verification. Any data collection, no matter where it takes place, must adhere to the European Union's General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR), no matter where it is carried out.

3.3 - Workplace safety - All persons engaged on behalf of RRC must take all reasonable precautions in relation to workplace safety, notably by knowing the location of the first aid kit (or kits) and fire extinguisher or extinguishers.

4. Compliance

4.1 - Framework - All employees and anyone engaged to conduct work on behalf of RRC will be provided with this Code of Conduct. The line or project manager will arrange within one week of starting the engagement with RRC to ensure that the employee or contractor has read and understood the terms of this policy. Compliance training will be arranged as and when more than one employee or contractor expressions concern or a misunderstanding of the policy.

4.2 - Evaluation and reporting - The Chairperson and a designated team from the organisation will review, on an annual basis, all matters relating to implementation of this policy. Its findings will be reflected in the organisation's annual report, redacted for confidentiality but focusing on process and its adherence to the standards set out in this policy.

1 - Overview

The trustees apologise to the Charity Commission for the late submission of this report. As a purely voluntary initiative, currently without funding, it has been challenging to bring trustees together to conclude this short report.
