

Hey Jude Trustees Annual Report April 23

The Charity has remained active in continuing its role in providing advice to patients with cancer, neurological and autoimmune diseases.

Following the Covid lockdowns, the direction that the charity has taken is to provide most advice by written communication instead of personal visits. This is partly due to reluctance of people to visit still and partly due to the distance many patients are from the charity location.

The income is small as we do not feel the need to have a large income as our spending continues to be minimal and no one is employed by the charity. In due of this we have not needed to hold any fundholding events this year again.

In view of the above facts, the trustees are in agreement that the charity should continue in its present format.

Henry Mannings
on behalf of the trustees.
