EXCLUSIVE The day I found £200,000 of cocaine on an Isle of Wight beach: Dog-walker reveals his shock as he watched scores of drug-filled bundles washed up on the South Coast

Nestling beneath sandstone cliffs dating back 200 million years, the beaches along the Isle of Wight's rugged Jurassic Coast are a magnet for fossil hunters. The lucky ones even find the occasional dinosaur bone. Last Saturday morning, however, while walking her dog along the shore and picking up bits of litter, as is her habit, Kayt Wolfe stumbled across something of considerably more value - in monetary terms, at least. An oblong, black canvas, zip-up bag measuring about 4ft by 3ft, that she first assumed was a cushion, thrown or blown off a passing boat.

BSP COMMENTS ON THE SEAWALL PUBLIC CONSULTATION LAUNCH

“A rather timely launch of the public consultation on the Yaverland and Shanklin Coastal Defence scheme was cancelled at Sandown zoo yesterday due to flooding. There is another public exhibition at the zoo today and tomorrow at the Broadway Centre but basically once you read through the whole thing (goodness knows how much that consultation cost to put together) the basic options we the public have from 1-5 are: to do nothing or to repair the existing wall and raise the height of it. No indication is given of cost or who is to pay for the work but as the finishing date is 2028 I assume it will be high”

Nurdle Total: 319 Biobeads Total: 136 Microplastic Fragments: 154... We've bagged them, tagged and imaged them ready for upload either by Intertek or by us. EGGCASE SURVEY WITH BEMBRIDGE SUSTAINABILITY GROUP

“From our last Bembridge Eggcase Survey in December. We found a total of 626 eggcases. 12 of these were small spotted catsharks, 48 were undulate skate, 274 were spotted skate and 292 were Thornback skate. Many thanks to Gary, Sue, Jan and Neeve, the team at Blue Seas Protection and Sharklab for all their support and advice. Especially to Neeve for spending three hours with me teaching me how to classify them!

We will be doing another survey soon. The team at Blue Seas Protection and Sharklab think we may have a local nursery sight for these sharks and skate, very exciting. Looking forward to working with you more in 2023 to protect our amazing seas and the wildlife within it.”

EXCHANGES AND CORRESPONDENCE FROM OUR BSP COLLEAGUE JONATHAN POYNER IN AUSTRALIA

“As requested by Susan Jane, a few recent pictures taken around the little coastal town of Narooma (Australia). I lived on the IOW for around 30yrs fishing, diving, surfing etc.

I included a couple of pic's of the snow as so many don't realise how big Oz is and how diverse the climate. We've been involved with various research projects over the years and spend hundreds of hours on and under the water. Encounters with various whales, dolphins, sharks and many fish species. Being under water with the fish is our happy place. We do hunt and catch fish which greatly helps when working with both fishing and green groups."
