Annual Report for the 2025 Financial Year

Incomindios UK

During the past year, we continued to focus on our mission of promoting and supporting the rights of Indigenous peoples globally, alongside the protection and preservation of the environment. In 2025, our UK activities placed particular emphasis on Indigenous rights education and public awareness-raising, with continued attention to Indigenous women and youth and the role of Indigenous knowledge and leadership in environmental and climate justice.

While we remain small and are growing gradually as a start-up charity, we are pleased to report steady progress across our education, content, and outreach work:

- We continued to publish educational and research-informed content through the Incomindios UK website, supporting public learning and constructive dialogue on Indigenous rights and environmental justice.
- We further developed and delivered the Incomindios Human Rights Education Network (IHREN), including online public talks and educational resources, as well as the IHREN School Program, which offers tailored Indigenous rights modules for secondary-level students.
- We continued to promote Indigenous scholars and their work, including spotlighting our 2025 Incomindios-Lippuner Scholar, Yadixa Del Valle (Guna, Panama), and sharing her research and perspectives through UK networks.
- We delivered and promoted IHREN webinars for UK audiences, featuring Indigenous speakers and educators, and supporting informed dialogue on Indigenous rights, climate justice, and activism.
- We continued to use our social media platforms to amplify Indigenous voices, community-led issues, and educational initiatives.
- Our activities continued to be supported through volunteer time and in-kind contributions, allowing us to operate on a low-cost basis consistent with our current scale.

IHREN speaker support and funding (2025)

In 2025, the Incomindios Human Rights Education Network (IHREN) speaker series was supported by a small restricted grant from the British Association for American Studies (BAAS). This funding enables Incomindios UK to provide modest honoraria (£150 per speaker; total £750) to support Indigenous speakers contributing to IHREN webinars. During the 2025 financial year, several IHREN speakers were confirmed and delivered webinars, with additional speakers scheduled to participate later in the year in line with the terms of the grant.

Speakers publicly listed on the Incomindios UK website for the IHREN Speaker Series include:

- Yadixa Del Valle Guardia (Incomindios-Lippuner Scholar)
- Venaya Yazzie
- Hartman Deetz

Financial note

Aside from the restricted BAAS grant designated for IHREN speaker support, Incomindios UK continued to deliver its activities without requiring additional operational funding. We remain mindful of our charitable purposes and ensure that all activities and expenditures align with our governing documents and policies.

As we look to the future, we are encouraged by the continued development of IHREN and our UK education work. We remain committed to strengthening Indigenous rights education, supporting Indigenous voices, and building meaningful dialogue and partnerships in line with our charitable mission.

Sincerely,

Incomindios UK

Annual Report for the 2024 Financial Year

During the past year, we have continued to focus on our mission of promoting and supporting the rights of Indigenous peoples globally as well as protection and preservation of the environment. This year we have had a specific focus on Indigenous women and youth and climate action. We believe that through supporting Indigenous communities, raising awareness of their struggles and successes, engaging in Indigenous and non-Indigenous positive dialogue contributes to the wellbeing of the wider community through respect for nature and peoples who have lived off the lands for millennium. In the 2024 period we continued to slowly build our small team.

While we remain small and growing slowly as a start-up charity, we are proud to report the growth of our team and the promotion we view as progress milestones:

- We were approached by another film documentary (Sugarcane, 2024) whose aims were to promote Indigenous causes, they requested we review the documentary and write a film reviews in the lens of Indigenous rights protection. We received no remuneration for these actions.
- We made valuable collaborations with different universities in the UK, where we were able to share about the work that we do and spotlight some Indigenous cases that were of interest to the professor, students and curriculum of that relevant course
- We promoted Indigenous scholars and activists from central America who advocated for the protection of their communities rights and preservation of the environment.
- We held several webinars presenting some Indigenous scholars and their work, inviting UK audiences and networks which were well attended.
- Summarized and reported on the events of the UN as they relate to Indigenous peoples and protection of the environment
- We used our social media platforms to highlight the causes of Indigenous scholars, activists and communities
- We wrote and published articles from the content of our interviews with these Indigenous scholars.
- We built a team of volunteers of 5 people that worked on our social media and outreach and have continued to work on a zero-cost basis.

While we note this progress, we have not yet required any funding to operate due to our very small size and slow growth, therefore have nothing to submit for the financial review. We hope to continue to grow our team and financial base so that we can continue to do our work and reach our targets under our charitable purpose. We are careful to consider our policies and to remain within our charitable purposes.

As we look to the future, we are excited about the opportunities and challenges ahead. We are committed to continuing our mission and making a positive impact in the lives of those we serve.

Sincerely,

Incomindios UK

Annual Report for the 2021-2022 Financial Year

During the past year, we have continued to focus on our mission of promoting and supporting the rights of Indigenous peoples globally as well as protection and preservation of the environment. We believe that through supporting Indigenous communities, raising awareness of their struggles and successes, engaging in Indigenous and non-Indigenous positive dialogue contributes to the wellbeing of the wider community through respect for nature and peoples who have lived off the lands for millennium. In the 2021-2022 period we continued to slowly build our small team however had some setbacks coming out of the covid transitional period. In addition, some of our team had to take extended periods of time off due to maternity reasons and mental health.

While we remain small and growing slowly as a start-up charity, we are proud to report the growth of our team and the promotion we view as progress milestones:

- We promoted the cause of a local Indigenous community in Kenya
- We made valuable collaborations with different universities in the UK, where we were able to share about the work that we do and spotlight some Indigenous cases that were of interest to the professor, students and curriculum of that relevant course
- We promoted Indigenous scholars and activists from central America who advocated for the protection of their communities rights and preservation of the environment.

- We built a team of volunteers of 4 people that worked on our social media and outreach

While we note this progress, we have not yet required any funding to operate due to our very small size and slow growth, therefore have nothing to submit for the financial review beyond a deposit of 60£ to open a charity bank account through which nothing has been deposited and nothing has been withdrawn. We hope to continue to grow our team and financial base so that we can continue to do our work and reach our targets under our charitable purpose. We are careful to consider our policies and to remain within our charitable purposes.

As we look to the future, we are excited about the opportunities and challenges ahead. We are committed to continuing our mission and making a positive impact in the lives of those we serve.
