Wandsworth Prison Welfare Trust – Report and accounts for year ending 5 April 2025

Chairman’s report for the year to the 5 April 2025

The year began with a sense of crisis at every level. The Governor of Wandsworth Prison resigned in May just before a damning report was issued by the Chief Inspector of Prisons. The Chief Inspector also issued an Urgent Notification to the Government putting the prison into special measures.

The annual report from the Wandsworth Independent Monitoring Board was equally bad, describing vermin, poor living conditions, little time out of cells and frightening levels of violence shown to staff and other prisoners, with high numbers of men registered as self-harming and suicidal.

Given the total denial of access to the prison for WPWT during this very difficult period, there was little the charity could do in the early months of this year, but in June a new Governor, Andy Davy, was appointed, and over the next few months, WPWT established a relationship with him that has improved the situation considerably.

We were put in contact with the Governor responsible for the Safer Custody team and almost immediately began ordering and supplying items to relieve boredom and provide some interest and activity for the men.

Since then, we have supplied many wind-up radios a month for use in the segregation unit where men are in solitary confinement without TVs, and for men who are vulnerable but are held on a basic regime with little access to buy anything to amuse themselves or supplement their diet. For them a radio is a Godsend.

We also sent in games -chess, backgammon, dominos, snakes and ladders and ludo.

We have our own boards designed to fit the counter in a Wandsworth Cell, and we have bought all the pieces and dice that are necessary to play.

We have tried to set up a relationship with the neurodiversity team, and have bought poppers, Rubik cubes, and fidget toys. There is a lot still to do in this area.

For the library we have sent in secondhand jigsaws and reading glasses, and here too we have plans for closer working. We also sent supplies of reading glasses to the First Night Assessment unit.

During Covid there was a lot of colouring and art going on in the prison which had come to an abrupt end. This year we bought about £2000 of paint and colouring pens which is now in the prison and being used.

The most interesting project started after Christmas when it was decided that the reception area in the prison was unwelcome. Murals were designed and prisoners recruited to paint them, and the charity spent about £3000 on specialist paint.

From a very frightening and dismal start we have ended on a high note with much more to do. We are keen to make better connections with the Safer Custody team and the Neurodiversity team and the library. We are confident that the Governor will work with us in this. He has also been helping us build a relationship with PACT (Prisoner Advice and Care Trust) a charity that provides support and service to the families of prisoners and we are discussing providing play equipment and other items to make visits to prisoners more enjoyable and less stressful.

Chair's report

The year began very optimistically, the charity was working hard and bags and bags of books, jigsaws and clothes were being given. We were spending about one and a half thousand pounds a month on radios and bought distraction materials like wooden construction sets and art materials.

Whilst the initial room given by the prison authorities to us to use on G wing proved insecure, the second room was easier and had a half stable door so we could work and talk to men safely. There were difficulties because the G wing room became so popular with G wing residents that it was hard to find time to do all the requests for distraction packs coming from the rest of the prison - but we were certainly serving a need. We got better at packing large bags for the Safer Custody Team, the Healthcare Team, and Chaplaincy, so that there were distractions at more points in the prison and more staff who could get easy access and deliver them to men in need.

We developed close working relationships with the Head of Neurodiversity and began buying items for her which were intended to help men with profoundly neurodiverse needs. We also worked with the Head of the Shannon Trust and some officers buying dual language dictionaries for foreign nationals with little or no English. We forged links with Oxleas who provide healthcare so that their staff could give out distractions to those with physical and mental health needs.

It became apparent that the prison was very short of clothes for men, especially socks and pants. At Christmas 2023 we ran a hugely successful 'Socks for Christmas' campaign and every man in the prison received two pairs of brand new socks.

We also did a lot of work collecting good, sound, second hand and new trainers for men in the prison. Often men have no money coming to them from outside family and no job. If their shoes wear out it can be very difficult to manage and we were giving out perhaps 20 pairs of these trainers a week - as many as we could source.

Similarly, we put great efforts into the 'clothing for release' cupboard so that there was always a coat, a hoodie, a pair of jeans and tracksuit bottoms for anyone being released. Because we were very short of space, we cleared out old unusable stock and focused down on just those items most demanded. We bought new strong rails, good coat hangers, and worked with the orderlies to make sure that everything issued was clean.

Unfortunately, after the escape of a prisoner from Wandsworth in September 2023, there was a considerable focus on security and a tightening of all rules allowing movement of goods, acceptable items, and the security of staff. In November 2023, keys were removed from charity and our work was put into suspense.

The book trolleys continued but even they were resisted by the prison authorities as being a security risk. Small purchases and supplies continued until the end of the year for goods that could be delivered directly into the prison but very little was achieved.

The charity reported the problem to the charity Commissioners who suggested reporting again as matters resolved themselves.

And so after such a good start to the year, it ended very quietly. The prison had serious problems which became public knowledge with the Chief Inspectors Report in May 2024. The charity was unable to help, but trustees decided to follow the Commissioners lead and wait.

Our thanks go to all our donors. Principal financial donors include:

- Miles Trust
- Second Growth
- Putney United Gospel Society
- Christ the King church, Wimbledon Park
- South London Churches
- St Michaels church, Croydon
- Several anonymous substantial donations from private individuals
- Many others, often via our website

We also had hundreds of people who sent socks for the Christmas appeal – too long a list to thank you all individually here. Thank you all.

Afterword.

In August 2024 the new Governor asked to meet the Chair and was clearly open to offers of help from the charity. Plans have been made to communicate further. The meeting was friendly and good tempered on both sides. It was clear that the charity can begin resupplying the prison with items prisoners need for support and distraction, or at the very least, discussing with staff what they need and what it is acceptable to give from a security perspective.

Annual Report 2022-23

(Year ending 5 April 2023)

Charity objectives: the relief of need of those people held within HMP Wandsworth by providing resources, support, activities and other such items as the charity trustees see fit in order to meet a basic standard of living.

Registered charity number 1198674

Our aims

Wandsworth Prison Welfare Trust has three key aims:

- Helping men to pass their days productively and peacefully
- Improving literacy and confidence with written material
- Providing supportive resources to men who are finding it hard to cope

How we started

Liz Bridge, the Quaker Chaplain in Wandsworth prison, persuaded the other chaplains and security governor to allow chaplaincy to beg and buy small wind-up radios for prisoners who were suicidal or self-harming, and the very poor. She went on to introduce a small and very limited jigsaw puzzle swap scheme which itself became a source of chess and dominos and playing cards for prisoners. All that was before covid hit.

At the start of Covid the Governor gave the chaplaincy £6000 so Liz could buy cards, chess pieces, dominos, and counters in bulk, and she ran a sort of workshop making our own boards and packing distraction packs for every cell in the prison.

The work developed through covid when our libraries closed. From a small existing fund, she bought book trolleys for each wing and was able to source supplies of donated novels in 12 languages. She begged the public for help and sourced all sorts of art materials, books and games.

The Present

In April 2022, the Wandsworth Prison Welfare Trust was set up as a charity to take over and fund the work properly. The charity works to help everyone and anyone in the prison, with no faith barriers - the trustees are Christian, Muslim and of no faith. The prison has allocated us a double cell at the bottom of a wing to act as a storeroom for our stuff and as a working base.

What we do

We work to provide what is needed to help the prisoners and fill the gaps in their lives. For instance:

- We run a clothes room at Reception/Departure offering free second-hand clothes and shoes to men on release.
- We run a rail of good suit jackets and nice pastel shirts for men to borrow and wear for online court appearances. This is held in the online courts' suite.
- We have 15 book trolleys on the wings and in reception, healthcare, online courts. We have kept a plentiful supply of free novels going on these trolleys to the present day because staffing problems make library visits difficult for most prisoners and the trolleys have proved popular and are heavily used.
- We have about 22 bags of DVDs out at any one time (about 700 DVDs out on the wings, about 700 readies for exchange).
- We supply men all over the prison with art and craft materials.
- We occasionally meet the demand for shoes and clothing when people are too big or too small or trans.
- We have a plentiful supply of Poundland reading specs.
- We supply the ever-popular wind-up radios.
- We have ready supplies of items to help people with ADHD.

Chair's report

We began the year working from a portacabin in one of the exercise yards of the prison. There was plenty of room, but access was complicated because the yard was often full of men. At Christmas we gave a hat to every man in the prison – a huge undertaking needing over 1000 hats.

<https://www.facebook.com/groups/722874485008202/>

At the start of 2023, we moved into G wing to a cell in the main run of basement cells. It has required careful racking, and a more disciplined approach to stock levels and the things we hold ready to give out. We have focused on popular items like matches and glue and wooden construction kits, with a smaller stock of games and art materials than before.

We have a presence in two other parts of the prison. At reception we have a room racked with clothing for men at release. Sad to say but many men do not have any clothing to leave in and we can dress them warmly and sensibly.

We also have a rail of suit jackets and good shirts and ties in the Online Courts suite so that men can look smart and clean for their online court appearances. Both areas need a lot of work to assemble the clothes and keep them in good order. More and more men know that clothes are available if the prison and families cannot provide for them and we have plans for a rail of suits needed if a man goes out to the funeral of a family member.

More men now rely on us to find them distraction packs when the future looks bleak and time hangs. We are delighted to find that officers are now willing to ask for distraction packs to help men who are distressed. We work hard to make sure that we have colouring books, Sudoku, wordsearches, and pens and notebooks readily available to prisoners at reception. This is when they first arrive and are at their most confused and unsettled. We also make sure that the segregation unit is supplied with wind up radios and that healthcare also has plentiful distraction materials. These two parts of the prison frequently hold men who are finding it difficult to cope and communicate with others.

It has been a difficult year. Despite the regime opening after the severe COVID restrictions the prison faces staffing challenges and men still face long periods in their cell especially at the weekends. Books, DVDs, paints, models, and jigsaws are essential to get through long lockdowns.

The prison officers and management – right up to the governor - and the other members of the chaplaincy have been very supportive of our work and we are very appreciative of their help. Working with them enables our work to reach further and be more effective, creating a more positive environment for all.

Money is beginning to flow, and we are learning how to appeal to the community inside and outside the prison. The prisoners are enthusiastic, officers help identify needs, and recently we have had a lot of help and support from the mayor of Wandsworth and Counsellors. We are starting an appeal to all the local places of worship to see if we can get a backbone of money secured by small annual standing orders.

Our thanks go to all our donors. Principal financial donors include:

- Miles Trust
- Second Growth
- Putney United Gospel Society
- South London Churches

- St Michaels church, Croydon
- Several anonymous substantial donations from private individuals
- Many others, often via our website

We also had hundreds of people who sent knitted hats for the Christmas appeal – too long a list to thank you all individually here. We had hats coming from New York to the Isle of Bute, single ones in padded envelopes, multiples in boxes and sacks; hats with pompoms, hats with faces, hats for Rastafarians. Thank you all.

Stories

G requires 5XL clothing, and no prison kit would fit him. He sat in his cell watching TV in kit that was cut down the sides simply to give him a covering to wear. His cell mate got his dinner, he wouldn't come out. We got him 5XL clothes - two sets – and he has blossomed. He is a servery worker and has a leading role with a clip board! This week he told me that he was losing weight. He smiled from ear to ear.

D is confused, he speaks little English and others around him seem to find him odd. He is very lonely. We found that he could draw and with donated art paper, proper graphite pencils and lots of praise he has found a role drawing rather beautiful portraits from photographs. He is still has unusual behaviour but has the respect of his neighbours and is admired for his skill which makes his prison life more bearable.

H is old for prison life; he is in his late fifties and was self-harming badly when we first knew him. He had no family outside, nor friends, and could barely read. There were two triumphs for H. We found that he needed reading glasses, and with the help of a pair of Poundland specs he is now an avid and radical reader of Inside Time the prison newspaper, slow but sure and getting faster. And he has a wind-up radio and is a dancer to the 1960s pop channel. Dancing in his specs, he describes himself as a mover and shaker.

B gave me his little bag of Skittles sweets at Christmas. He had no money whatsoever to buy any extra food, but the cook had given every prisoner a bag with a chocolate bar, a bag of skittles and a piece of cake for the holiday. B had worked with me packing and handing out woollen hats on the wings - and had had the hat of his choice and the fun of a weird job. I accepted his Skittles because he wanted very badly to give me a present at Christmas, and human beings must give and receive, but I wanted to cry.

K got a pair of socks from WPWT at Christmas in 2021. They are bright green with yellow fried eggs up the ankles. He is a Muslim who wears a long robe but when he sees me, he lifts the hem and jumps about – ‘still going Miss’ - I fear for the state of those socks but their sheer exuberance clearly helps him.

Y was once in the French Foreign Legion, where he learnt to model with bread. He makes the most beautiful monkeys with very cute faces. He is a bit secretive about the extra ingredients that stop the models rotting but he has a school of bread modellers on G wing learning the techniques, and WPWT supplies the paint.

When I first met M, I thought he might be blind. One eye was very cloudy, the other wandered, and he was crying. He had no volume control on his voice, and every other word was unrepeatable. Someone had stolen his vapes and he could not see how he could manage without. Eventually someone lent him a bit of vape and by then we were talking. I asked if he would try a jigsaw and without any interest, he said he would give it a go. A year later, I drop M three big puzzles every Friday, and his cell looks like the Sistine Chapel with jigsaws stuck up the walls and over the ceiling. We discuss the fact that he can always buy good jigsaws from Oxfam when he gets out and they are far cheaper than his old addictions. (Far, far cheaper).

Our box for donations of clothes or jigsaws outside the prison visitor centre.

Drawings created by various prisoners (done with materials we gave them).

Treasurer's report

We have had a successful first year, raising over £17,000 in donations and spending nearly £13,000 to help the men in Wandsworth Prison. We are grateful to all our generous donors – from trusts funds, to church congregations to those who donated via our website. Thank you all.

Unfortunately, we believe that the next year will be tougher: we started 2022-3 with a good stock of radios which are now depleted and we are spending just over £1,000 per month on other things from arts and crafts to books, puzzles and jigsaws. We estimate that we will need to spend around £20,000 in 2023-4, so I ask you to continue your generosity. Please think of the men getting reading glasses from us, or help with their ADHD (very common in prisons) and the difference it makes to their lives.
