LOVE OF THE GAME

The trustees present their report with the financial statements of the charity for the year ended 31 March 2025. The trustees have adopted the provisions of Accounting and Reporting by Charities: Statement of Recommended Practice applicable to charities preparing their accounts in accordance with the Financial Reporting Standard applicable in the UK and Republic of Ireland (FRS 102) (effective 1 January 2019).

OBJECTIVES AND ACTIVITIES

Objectives and aims

Love of the Game (LOTG) started as a campaign in 2021 and on 23 March 2023 became a Charitable Incorporated Organisation, registered with the Charity Commission (No 1202462, CIO No CE031792).

Our mission statement is:

To protect players of all ages from the potentially devastating impact of head injuries, while also protecting the integrity of the sports we know and love.

Love of the Game (LOTG) was founded by former England and British and Irish Lions rugby union international Simon Shaw MBE, businessman, dementia care pioneer, and former England Under-18 player Laurence Geller CBE, and Sally Pettipher, Chief of Staff to former international rugby captain and owner of Cornish Pirates, Sir Richard Evans (and now CEO of Cornish Pirates). Laurence Geller was subsequently appointed the UK Government's Ministerial Advisor on Concussion in Sport and chaired the Government's Innovation and Technology Forum for Concussion in Sport.

The aims of the founders of LOTG were to reduce concussion-related issues arising from contact and non-contact sports and by doing so preserve those sports by reducing the risk of early onset dementia and other neurological consequences to players, lengthening sporting careers and reducing the fear of taking part. LOTG is an impassioned community of athletes, players, fans, innovators and experts, united by our love of sport and the desire to fulfil our mission statement.

The objects of LOTG as established with the Charity Commission are fourfold: For the public benefit the protection and preservation of good health, in particular, but not exclusively, by:

- A. Funding and providing support for research into the efficacy of approaches used to prevent, mitigate and manage concussion-related injuries including but not limited to persistent concussion syndrome and early onset dementia in England and Wales and research into new medical technologies and treatments of concussion-related injuries provided that the useful results of such research are disseminated to the public at large.
- B. Educating medical practitioners and other professionals in the best methods for the diagnosis, care and treatment of persons with concussion-related injuries.
- C. Educating about and promoting accessibility to treatment within centres providing care and treatment to persons with concussion-related injuries.
- D. Raising awareness among the general public of all areas of concussion-related injuries.

ACHIEVEMENTS AND PERFORMANCE

Charitable activities

It was clear to LOTG in 2021 that what was lacking was a clear UK national integrated approach to concussion in sport. LOTG worked closely with the UK Government to define such an approach, and made significant contributions to the Government's response to the DCMS Select Committee report on concussion in sport as well as the first national Guidelines for Concussion Management in Grassroots Sport ("If in doubt, sit them out") which were published in April 2023. We were also key in setting up DCMS's Innovation and Technology Group and its Research Group. It was also clear that, although there was a significant body of expertise in concussion throughout medical and academic institutions in the UK, there was insufficient coordination and sharing of expertise. In 2022 LOTG began to draw together a network of leading neurosurgeons, neurologists, neuro-psychologists and radiographers from around 20 leading hospitals and centres. It was originally called the Regional Sports Concussion Centres Network but was renamed the UK Concussion Network (UKCN). It is co-chaired by Professor Peter Hutchinson from Cambridge and Professor Michael Parker from LOTG. The network has been invaluable in, inter alia, providing advice to LOTG and to government which helped them to craft the national guidelines for concussion management across all grassroot sports as mentioned above.

An important part of our work has been exploring new technologies of interest. LOTG has been involved in showcasing new technologies since its creation, starting with a 'Hackathon' in March 2021 which saw teams of students, researchers, designers and medics from the top universities in the UK formed to design new technologies to prevent, diagnose or treat concussion in sport. Media interest led to an ongoing LOTG focus on providing platforms for new technologies in the form of annual 'Demo Days'. Some of these have shown particular promise. We continue to work with WAVi, an early Demo Day participant, whose portable brain scanner has recently received FDA approval in the USA and the research paper is being reviewed for publication in 'Brain Research'. LOTG support for WAVi has involved funding three machines which have been deployed in testing at three rugby clubs in England. Another Demo Day product, PolarCap, a portable cooling system intended to reduce exercise-induced elevated brain temperature to prevent or limit long term cognitive impairment after brain trauma, is now being used by professional teams in ice hockey, football, rugby union and rugby league in multiple countries, including testing by the national rugby league team of Australia. In October 2024 we held another demo day showcasing 'BrainEye', 'Concussion Toolkit' and 'Abbot'. This was our second fundraising event at Holland and Holland and it was again generously supported by Unispace. It was targeted at a selected audience to help fund support for the tech companies who exhibited.

From an early stage it was clear too that insufficient attention had been given to prevention of concussion, as opposed to recognition, treatment and management. LOTG had organised and provided funding for a first Concussion Prevention Conference in 2022 and repeated that for a second conference in April 2024 in London, in partnership with the University of Bath and Calgary University. These conferences saw the creation of a new UK Concussion Prevention Network. A Steering Group and an Advisory Group have been set up to deliver the aims of the network and provide governance and communication with key stakeholder organisations. The conclusions of this second conference would influence the way in which LOTG has moved forward in the period from mid 2024 to the present, as explained below.

LOTG takes a solutions-based approach to the problem by working with athletes, technologists, academics and the business and financial communities to develop new technologies that will prevent, diagnose and treat head injuries in sport. Like most sports, success is the product of a whole team. Solving this crisis is no different. We have brought together a unique network of over 600 supporters representing the UK's major sports, government, academia, technology, science and business. We have forged new and productive relationships with major and grassroots sporting clubs, research institutes, charitable organisations and major governing sports bodies. Rather than focusing on the challenges of the past, LOTG's aim is to protect the players of the future and ensure that future athletes are protected from long term health risks that yesterday's and today's players have had to accept. In order to achieve this and fulfil the objects of the CIO, LOTG promotes a solutions-based approach across three pillars - education, science and technology which are of course not mutually exclusive.

Education

- Improving recognition of the symptoms of concussion
- Positioning the long-term protection of the head and brain as part of a player's training regimen and routine

Science

- Promoting more coherent sharing of information to aid in the identification of diagnosis tools

- Developing a more sophisticated method of identifying the symptoms and signs of concussion at the point of impact and for the use of proven bio-markers over the course of a player's career
 - Creating impact assessment wearables and big data analysis to grade risk and severity of concussion and the proper course of action needed
- Technology
- Promoting multi-disciplinary collaboration (bringing together investors, inventors, researchers, clinicians and sports experts) to accelerate product development, experimentation and implementation.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

Principal funding sources

The Accounts for the financial years 2024-2025 are attached to this report. Key figures are income of £32,866 and expenditure of £46,131.

We received a generous donation of £25,000 in August 2024 from the Rubin Foundation Charitable Trust, which helped fund our activities including the Concussion Prevention Conference. As noted in last year's accounts we received in May 2023 an interest-free five- year loan from Laurence Geller. The remaining income derives from fund-raising activities at Demo Days and other events, through individual donations or proceeds of charity auctions.

This income is then directed towards funding individual technology projects as mentioned or the running costs of LOTG.

Reserves policy

During the accounting period LOTG had no reserves. However, the current Trustees of LOTG agreed in early 2025 to set up a reserve fund for the following financial year comprising 10% of all future donations or contributions from fund-raising events, to ensure the organisation is able to cover the cost of any future obligations, including the repayment of any existing or future loans.

FUTURE PLANS

As noted, the first phase of LOTG was focused on helping establish the basic frameworks and to influence and guide Government and sporting bodies' policy on concussion in sport, especially grassroots sport. The second Concussion Prevention Conference in April 2024 however highlighted areas where LOTG, and others, should increasingly focus their work. The Network set an ambitious target to reduce concussions in UK youth and community sports by 30% by 2030. This goal will be pursued and through implementing new policies and training initiatives, through equipment interventions. The conference concluded that education was key, both of players and teachers/organisers. LOTG had recognised the importance of education early on and had engaged with leading organisations such as Complete Concussion and Podium to determine the best way of getting the key messages across via Apps etc. But the 2024 conference and its ambitious objectives have provided the impetus for more action on our part in this area. We are in discussions with Complete Concussion on the provision of free online training and have entered into a contractual relationship with Concussion Toolkit, an organisation which provides digital tools and concussion workshops, particularly for universities and schools, for them to be our delivery partner.

Despite this increasing emphasis on education, we have not stepped back from some of our earlier activities, notably showcasing new technologies and processes, or work with the UK Concussion Network. Both BrainEye and Abbot (biomarkers measuring tool), participants in the 2024 Demo Day, are now pursuing clear business opportunities eg Braineye with Stade Francais and Abbott with the Philippines. And Concussion Toolkit's participation in that event led eventually to the arrangement with LOTG. We continue to search for emerging technologies of interest and are planning another Demo Day for the first part of 2026.

In partnership with Concussion Toolkit, LOTG are helping to fund an education and awareness programme, initially throughout all universities and public schools within the UK. This programme will then be extended to all national schools and grassroots community sports clubs. Our goal is to provide consistent awareness training to identify potential head injuries as they occur, guidance on how to initiate appropriate 'return to play' protocols and, if necessary, how to seek appropriate medical treatment and recovery.

We also remain committed to the UK Concussion Network which will be hosting its first face-to-face meeting in London in December 2025 and LOTG will be a key participant.
