These meetings are invaluable as they can stop emerging community safety issues from spiraling out of control and with early interventions address community safety issues effectively in partnership with the PSNI. The RESPECT team has worked with the PSNI to address community safety issues on a daily basis, ranging from anti-social behaviour to interface violence, bonfires, parades, crime prevention, incidents of crime, criminal damage, arson, housing (problem tenants) and suicide and self-harm incidents. Resulting on average more than 5 calls per week out of hours from PSNI for support by the project.

The project is a steering group member of the Greater Shankill Suicide and self-harm community response plan and continues to meet with the group. These meetings are attended by the community, working in partnership with all statutory bodies to address issues relating to suicide and provide first responder response to an attempted suicide and sadly providing support to families when someone takes their life.

Achievements and performance
Factors relevant to achieve objectives

The Project has contributed to reducing, sectarianism, anti-social and high-risk behaviors of young people; provide young people with decision making skills, employability skills and the information and mechanisms to empower them to take responsibility for their own life and make life choices; and programs for parents and those working with young people to promote good parenting and listening skills. The Respect Project does not duplicate existing provision but provides a steppingstone from which participants can move on.

At its most powerful, the Respect Project has changed the lives of young people who were (or were likely to) engaging in criminal behaviors or behaviors that put themselves and others at risk; and those who had 'given up' on training or employment opportunities. Young people worked towards goals and have increased respect for their own community. Through education and training young people are moving on from what can be a downward spiral of generational unemployment and poverty.

In delivering personal development programs to adults/parents increases community capacity and gives participants new skill sets to draw upon when supporting their own children and other young people within the community. With adults/parents using the project methodology to enable them to address issues that affect young people, listen to their needs and put in place mechanisms of support in place so young people can fulfill their potential in life.

Financial review

FYCD receives management fees and operational costs from RESPECT and management fees from Farset Development Limited.

RESPECT received funding from the Department of Communities for the period September 2012 to March 2023.

Community Think Tanks is has previously received grants from Community Relations Council, Belfast City Council for various pamphlets.

Going Concern

After making appropriate enquires, the trustees have a reasonable expectation that the company has adequate resources to continue in operational existence for the foreseeable future. For this reason, they continue to adopt the going concern basis in preparing the financial statements.

Reserves Policy

It is the policy of the charity that unrestricted funds which have not been designated for a specific use should be maintained at a level equivalent to between three and six month's expenditure. The trustees consider that reserves at this level will ensure that, in the event of a significant drop in funding, they will be able to continue the charity's current activities while consideration is given to ways in which additional funds may be raised. This level of reserves has been maintained throughout the year.

The trustees have set a reserves policy that reserves be built up and maintained at a level which ensures that Farset Youth and Community Development Ltd core activity could continue during a period of unforeseen difficulty (maximum 6 months) and a portion of reserves be built up and maintained in a readily realisable form.

Risk Management

The exposure of the company to risk is not material for the assessment of the financial position and profit and loss of the company.
