Achievements, Performance and Public Benefit.

The Group continues to provide a hub where members of this rural community can come together to socialise and enjoy activities together. We continued using an evening for folk to come and try clay pigeon shooting with barbecue, we held an evening with a speaker on The Royal Family giving an interesting talk on the royal houses and showing part of his "royal" collection. We held our annual quiz as well as a talk on Christmas Traditions. All these events were supported and appreciated by the local community. We continue to help with music classes in bagpipes and drumming and the numbers involved in this activity have been maintained at the previous level with some new learners. The Group committee are now looking forward to running a diverse programme in the incoming twelve months. The Group has given careful consideration to the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland's guidance on public benefit to ensure that the activities entered into during the year have helped to achieve the Group's objectives and activities, as well as providing public benefit.
