TRUSTEES REPORT FOR THE FINANCIAL YEAR ENDING 1st JAN 2024

Orchid Studios

The trustees present their report with the financial statements of the charity for the year ended 1st January 2024. In Compiling this Report the Trustees have had regard to the Northern Ireland Charity Commission's Public benefit requirements statutory guidance.

Objects

The Objects are to promote and support the advancement of Arts, Culture and Education through supporting visual artists and promoting the value of arts and creativity to the general public, locally (in the greater Belfast area), nationally and internationally, by:

- a) establishing and maintaining good quality artist studios that will provide affordable studio and workspace for visual arts and professionals in a studio environment;
- b) providing access to appropriate and secure visual artists studios in an accessible location in order to enable and enhance professional and public networks on a local, national and international level;
- c) providing facilities for the production of high quality, ambitious art practice across a range of media;
- d) promoting the work of artists via a range of forms such as exhibitions, artist talks, public performance, education events, public commissions and publications;
- e) cultivating creativity and learning through dialogue and exchange, within and beyond the studio, in order to promote the visual arts and the importance of their role within the development of a rich cultural environment.

Public benefit statement

- a) The direct benefits flowing from this purpose include the much-needed provision of affordable studio spaces for visual artists to create artwork, thus also supporting the development of artistic practices and the professional public careers of artists.
- b) The direct benefits flowing from this purpose include the enhanced ability of artists to develop networks locally, nationally and internationally through the provision of well-maintained and professionally engaged and networked studios.

c) The direct benefits from this are that members are provided with good quality studios and facilities that support the development and production of high quality and ambitious artworks, thus supporting art practices across a range of media. The longer-term benefits are that these practices and artworks, through exhibition and other public contexts, enhance the richness, diversity and experience of cultural life in Northern Ireland and beyond.

d) The direct benefits from this purpose include the increased visibility of the visual art activities of our members through public outputs such as exhibitions, projects and workshops. These platforms and events contribute to the enhancement and richness of art, culture and community in Northern Ireland.

e) The direct benefit from this purpose is the enrichment of the public's experience of the visual arts and creative practices through their encounters with artists and their practices via the context of open studio events, public exhibitions, public talks and community/public engagement events such as the Open Studios. E.g., The Open Studios are an opportunity for the public to engage directly with the artists within the studio environment and to get an insight into their working practices. These public events encourage an enhanced educational and public awareness of visual art creative practice and a deeper understanding of the arts and their role in exploring and communicating a wide range of subjects and ideas.

Through regular studio meetings, feedback, and reports the benefits from these purposes will be demonstrated via;

a) members' successes in their artistic practice as demonstrated via exhibition outputs, awards, prizes, public projects, commissions, achievements, recognition at local, national, and international level, and through their career development.

b) invitations and studio-visits from local, national, and international networks of curators, interested wider public and art critics.

c) promotional materials relating to members' artwork and exhibitions, highlighting the development of innovative work, showing the recognition received within art networks and in the wider public realm.

d) members' public facing or educational activities, such as workshops, open studios and talks that lead onto further opportunities.

e) the diversity, reach and quality of activities, enhancing visual art awareness, value and education within, and to, the wider public and cultural environment.

There is no harm arising from any of the purposes.

The charity's beneficiaries are visual artists, the visual arts community and the wider general public.

There is no private benefit that flows from the purpose of the charity other than the incidental benefit to visual artists having adequate affordable studios to work in, which is necessary in order to achieve the direct and wider benefits of the charity.

Activities / Performance Report:

Studio provision

In the period from Jan 2023 to Jan 2024 we have been able to maintain and provide nine good quality, secure, affordable studio spaces. We have been able to increase this number from eight by adding an additional studio space and enabling another artist to become a member and avail of studio provision. We have also been able to provide workshop space and communal areas.

Activities enabled by studio provision

The quality studio provision allows for and enables a wide range of members' art practices that contribute to membership and public benefit. As part of this it also enables the development of its members' careers which it supports through providing a vibrant studio environment, professional networks and peer supportive ethos. This provision allows for members' activities to thrive and develop and contribute to the wider public and to the advancement of arts and culture and education in and from Northern Ireland. Temporary studio provision is provided from time to time to artists who are not members.

Testimonies:

As stated, we collect feedback from members as to value of the studio provision at Orchid Studios. Here are some testimonies from the recent period:

Having a studio at Orchid is invaluable to me and fulfils many functions for me. It allows me to have a space to think by making. I use it to develop and explore concepts, musings and narratives. I have the space and freedom to play with materials and workout ways to communicate ideas. These ideas can be with a view to building a body of work for show or can be passing wonderings that may lead to future development. Although materialisation of passing wonderings often seems insignificant, these creations often become refined over time and form finished pieces which are publicly exhibited. The studio allows me not just the physical space but the mental space to look, analyse and understand my own practice.

Being part of the studio group and a community is important for me. There is room for discussion, critique and the recognition of a shared purpose. The knowledge of it being there as my creative place to return to, does provide a security and peace. It also is the base where work develops before eventually reaching the public.

To have a studio to store work and to lay out new work in development is really important when it comes to getting studio visits from curators, peers or mentors.

It is extremely valuable to be in a studio group. Art making is a solitary process and can be very isolating. It is amazing to go to a studio where I will bump into other artists, we will talk about what we are working on, or just say hello. Our studio is centrally located, the building has a lift, large windows and large spaces. All of this enables my work to flourish.

Having a studio at Orchid has been invaluable to me. Since joining in May 2023 I have had the space to physically immerse myself in my sculptural practice as well as continuing an ongoing body of drawing work. I have also continued my public projects raising awareness of the nighttime environment and light pollution. The working environment with other artists has been invaluable. I have also been able to bring students from the BA Fine Art (where I teach) to see the studios which give valuable insight to working practices of artists.

In my studio I have been working with works on paper and mixed media pieces – which is made possible by having large and adaptable workspace. The studio also allows me to construct storage possibilities for existing sculptures and framed works as well as documenting some of them for a website that I am preparing. Older and large work is something that is needed to be stored, so they can be publicly seen in future opportunities and as key to the legacy of an artist's activities.

The studio is an essential place for creativity – it offers space, facilities, networks and most importantly space for things to happen. It is a strange place – unlike most other places of work – where new ways of thinking and new logics can emerge. This means it's also a diverse place – and all the artists in the studios have very different practices and ways of working – and different experiences – so there's a great sense of possibility. Everyone is also involved in finding ways for their work to reach the public in many different and pertinent ways – so the sense of public engagement and social relevance is very real. I think this generates the possibility for exciting and challenging and ambitious artworks.

Working over many years and exhibition a lot also means a space for storage and the administration of an art practice is important. Much of my work is large and some of it fragile and so the ability to build and store crates is vital – so that the work can travel of other places to be seen

My studio Orchid Studios gave me space to develop work for an ambitious solo exhibition. I was able to recreate elements of my studio in the exhibition. The workshop facility in our studio enabled me to experiment with more sculptural elements.

Independent Examiner's Report Sep 2024

Independent Examiner's Report to the trustees of Orchid Studio ('the Company')

I report to the charity trustees on my examination of the accounts of the Company for the year ended 01 January 2024.

Respective responsibilities of charity trustees and examiner

As the charity's trustees you are responsible for the preparation of the accounts in accordance with the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008.

Having satisfied myself that the accounts of Orchid Studio are not required to be audited under Part 16 of the 2006 Act and are eligible for independent examination, I report in respect of my examination of your charity's accounts as carried out under section 65 (2) of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 ('the 2008 Act'). In carrying out my examination I have followed the Directions given by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland under section 65(9)(b) of the 2008 Act.

Basis of independent examiner's statement

I have examined your charity accounts as required under section 65 of the Charities Act and my examination was carried out in accordance with the general Directions given by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland under section 65(9)(b) of the Charities Act. My examination included a review of the accounting records kept by the charity and a comparison of the accounts presented with those records. It also included consideration of any unusual items or disclosures in the accounts, and seeking explanations from you as charity trustees concerning any such matters.

My role is to state whether any material matters have come to my attention giving me cause to believe that:

1. accounting records were not kept in respect of Orchid Studio as required by section 386 of the 2006 Act; or
2. the accounts do not accord with those records; or
3. the accounts do not comply with the accounting requirements of section 396 of the 2006 Act other than any requirement that the accounts give a 'true and fair view' which is not a matter considered as part of an independent examination; or
4. the accounts have not been prepared in accordance with the methods and principles of the Statement of Recommended Practice for accounting and reporting by charities [applicable to charities preparing their accounts in accordance with the Financial Reporting Standard applicable in the UK and Republic of Ireland (FRS 102)].

I have completed my examination and have no concerns in respect of the matters (1) to (4) listed above and, in connection with following the Directions of the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland, I have found no matters that require drawing to your attention.
