Activities

Activities: 'It makes grants, donations or gifts to organisations', 'It carries out activities or services itself'

Purposes: 'the advancement of education', 'the advancement of citizenship or community development', 'the advancement of the arts, heritage, culture or science', 'the advancement of environmental protection or improvement', 'the relief of those in need by reason of age, ill-health, disability, financial hardship or other disadvantage', 'the advancement of animal welfare'

What the charity does: The charity was formed to foster good environmental practices and nurture proper conservation

Beneficiaries: 'Children or young people', 'Older People', 'People with a particular ethnic or racial origin', 'No specific group, or for the benefit of the community', 'Other charities or voluntary bodies'

Objectives: The objects of the group are, by charitable means only:- (a) to set up a system of nature reserves throughout Scotland, for the purpose of protecting Scottish wildlife and to encourage a greater interest from the public in this wildlife. (b) to plant indigenous trees on these reserves and so restore the land to some semblance of what it was in previous times. (c) to set up small education centres on these reserves so that members can take parties for study and recreation. (d) to offer facilities to other groups with similar interests. (e) to produce material for distribution to the public showing our work and the concern we have for the Scottish countryside. (f) to run educational trips for members and non-members to bring them into closer contact with the countryside. (g) to run film shows and other events that will inform the public of our work and the conservation movement in general.

Trustee Report

During the year the Tree Trust received a legacy provided for in the Will of the Late Mrs Maureen Lindsay in the amount of £114,471 after all legal expenses. The purpose of this legacy was to continue the work of the Trust as set out in its Constitution.

The Trust's Bothy at Loch Fada by Ardfern, Argyll is still undergoing annual maintenance to the outer part with new Aspen Timber. This continues to involve work parties coming up from Glasgow.

Regardless of this, the building continues to function for volunteers, individuals and small groups wishing to study wildlife.

With our raised bog at Cathburn Moss, near Newmains, North Lanarkshire, we have had volunteer work parties from Butterfly Conservation to continue the clearance for the habitat of the Small Pearl Bordered Fritillary and other insects and plants.

We are still in the process of identifying suitable primary school teachers to train in wildlife and plant subjects, but this continues to prove difficult as not much priority for those subjects is being given at training colleges.

The Trust continues to be available to give advice and talks to the public, and has continuing memberships of various charities, and offer our reserves for any member of official from one of these organisations to undertake research.

We continue to be in contact with North Lanarkshire Council's warden, responsible for the Cathburn Moss area in Newmains, to assist in their conservation policy.

Background Information

Current Trustees and Office Bearers

██████████ (President), ██████████ (Treasurer), ██████████ and ██████████.

The recruitment and reappointment of Trustees and office bearers is made at the Annual General Meeting (AGM) which is held in November each year.

The Tree Trust is governed by its Constitution and is an unincorporated voluntary organisation for administration purposes.

The Tree Trust Purpose

The Tree Trusts charitable purposes are for the following:-

- conservation of the natural environment
- species conservation
- education of young people in outdoor matters
- communicating with other charities nationally and internationally
- assist efforts to challenge global warming & species extinction of global flora & fauna

The Tree Trust has focused on those with mental health issues regarding peace of mind, and has run visits to its Bothy at Ardfern in Argyll, where free accommodation continues to be made available to them. This has been extended to persons of low income wishing to find outdoor recreation in the form of wildlife attractions.

Finance and Administration

Trustees receive no form of remuneration and meet their own travel costs.

The Trust is a small self-contained charity, receiving funding through specific donations from donor bodies and individuals.

Background and History

The Trust oversees two nature reserves at Ardfern on the Craginish Peninsula, Argyll. Located here are Hen Harriers and various other species of butterflies encouraged and maintained through the planting of native Scottish Trees and the rewilding of this area. In addition to these reserves there is a raised bog, the Cathburn Moss, located in North Lanarkshire, also maintained by the Trust.

In the past the Trust has organised international youth exchanges with many Eastern European countries and our own Youth Group, along with attending conferences across Europe and the USA. This included a small group visiting and living with the Sioux Native American nation reservation in South Dakota for a month.

Those involved in these exchanges were predominantly from working class families, mixing for the first time with their counterparts in Russia, Poland and Germany.
