What the charity does: The Scouts provide young people with fun, adventure, and skills for life. They support young people aged 4 to 25 through a programme of activities that promote personal development, teamwork, leadership, and resilience. Scouts achieve this through outdoor adventures, community engagement, and challenges that encourage learning by doing. Volunteers play a key role in delivering these experiences, helping to create a safe and inclusive environment where young people can grow in confidence and contribute positively to society.

Beneficiaries: 'Children or young people'

Objectives: The purpose of scouting is to contribute to the development of young people in achieving their full physical, intellectual, social and spiritual potentials, as individuals, as responsible citizens and as members of their local, national and international communities.
