What the charity does: St Andrews Environmental Network (StAndEN) is a community-rooted charity based in Fife, working to reduce carbon emissions, tackle fuel poverty, and enable sustainable living. As a registered Scottish charity and company limited by guarantee, we deliver practical environmental solutions that improve lives, protect the planet, and strengthen community resilience. Our charitable purpose is to advance environmental protection, relieve poverty and hardship (particularly fuel poverty), and promote sustainable living through advice, education, and community action. We achieve this by: Providing free, impartial energy advice and small energy-saving installations that help households cut costs and emissions. Operating reuse, recycling, and refill projects that reduce waste, support people in crisis, and normalise sustainable consumption. Delivering environmental education and training that build knowledge, skills, and green employability pathways. Restoring green spaces.
