What the charity does: JustRight Scotland wants Scotland to be a place where everyone's human rights are a reality, where everyone has access to justice, and where systems are fixed when they get in the way of this. JustRight Scotland was set up in 2017 by a small team of human rights lawyers. We use the law to defend and extend people's rights in Scotland. We now run four specialist centres of legal practice. Our lawyers and caseworkers provide advice, representation and support to hundreds of people every year. Our policy, communications and participation team extends the reach of our legal work, building collaborative campaigns and partnerships, working alongside people with lived experience of the issues we work on, influencing policy makers, and producing accessible information about human rights and the legal system.

Beneficiaries: 'No specific group, or for the benefit of the community'

Objectives: The organisation's purposes are: 4.1 the relief of those in need, by reason of age, ill-health, disability, financial hardship or other disadvantage, in particular, those who face barriers accessing justice, or in the distribution of wealth, opportunities, and privileges within society, for reasons that relate to inequality, discrimination and human rights abuses (the "Target Groups"). 4.2 the advancement of human rights, conflict resolution or reconciliation within the Target Groups. 4.3 the promotion of equality and diversity within the Target Groups. 4.4 the advancement of citizenship or community development within the Target Groups. and 4.5 the advancement of education, in particular through, but not limited to providing specialist legal advice and representation, widening access to early legal advice through helplines, surgeries and advocacy, increasing capacity in civil society by providing second-tier advice and legal consultancy to other third sector organisations, raising awareness of human rights through public legal education, professional training, and publication of free digital resources, and contributing to policy and research at a local, national and international level.
