Purposes: 'the advancement of public participation in sport'

What the charity does: Club Sport Aberdeen exists to help people in Aberdeen take part in sport and physical activity, with a focus on increasing participation, improving skills, and supporting long-term involvement in sport. The charity does this by working with local sports clubs, volunteers, and partner organisations to remove barriers to participation and create more opportunities to get involved. This includes supporting clubs with development and governance, helping volunteers and coaches through training and resources, and using grant funding to widen access to sport, particularly for young people and those who might not otherwise be able to take part. Through these activities, Club Sport Aberdeen aims to strengthen local sports clubs, encourage healthier and more active lifestyles, and contribute positively to the wellbeing of the Aberdeen community.
